AT THE THEATERS

Bathroom Scene Is Comedy Film "Baby Mine"

Why is a bathroom funnier than any other room in the house? This is what Charlotte Greenwood, lanky stage comedienne, making her screen bow in "Baby Mine," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, at the Arcade theater today for a three-day run would like to know.

She was just beginning the climax of her comedy role in the picture—a filmization of the stage play, with Karl Dane and George K. Arthur co-starring as a team, when a bathroom was chosen as the locale for the principal "wow" in her role.

"I don't know why it is, but it's true, on the stage and seemingly the screen, that any scene played in a bathroom is funny," she said. "You could take the most tragic scene in the world, play it straight with a Bernhardt or a Mansfield—and if it were located in a bathroom it would make the audience laugh."

"I suppose one reason is the incongruity of anything played in the bathroom—that is, any thing of serious nature. And, too, perhaps, the audience feels it's being taken 'behind the scenes,' so to speak, and also because it associates a bathroom with a shower in which one turns the wrong faucet and gets hot water when one expects cold, and vice versa."

"Anyhow, it's a fact that on stage and screen, bathrooms always prove the best locales for comedy scenes—until, basically, there is nothing—funny about a bathroom or even the process of ablution."

Miss Greenwood forsook the stage for a time to play Karl Dane's sweetheart in the new picture, an adaptation of Margaret Mayo's famous stage farce, adapted to the screen by F. Hugh Herbert and Sylvia Thalhfer, and directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Miss Greenwood, Louise Lorraine and others of note are in the comedy, the comedy team of "Tookles" fame.

Robin Hood Legend Basis For New Western

While other motion picture producers were buckling their belts for new ideas in which to feature their Western star, EBO officials brought forth one of the most famous legends in history, placed it in a new setting, and formed one of the best Rob Steele starring vehicles they have ever made. The legend they adapted was that of Robin Hood and the resulting picture, "Robin Hood," which will be at the Star theater tomorrow and Wednesday. Taking the famous old hunter of merry England and transplanting him in a modern western setting, W. C. Tuttle, the author, wrote a tale of romance and adventure for the 21-year-old Western star. Oliver Drake adapted this story for the screen and Wallace Fox directed.

"Robin Hood" deals with the adventures of a young cowboy engaged in the task of hunting down an outlaw whose reputation has been that he stole from the rich and gave to the poor. But a mystery is evolved out of the fact that the bandit has changed his tactics and become nothing more than a common thief. The manner in which this mystery is unraveled forms the climax of a gripping tale of life and romance in the West.

Of course there is a love interest woven into the picture, and this is ably portrayed by Gladys Quatro, a comparatively newcomer to the screen. She plays the daughter of a Spanish rancher, which part fits her type of dark, Latin beauty. As the second part of a double feature program "Robin Hood" with Buffalo Bill Jr. will be shown.

A doctor had just finished taking the temperature of a stock broker, who was suffering with a raging fever.

"It's gone to 102," he announced in a hushed voice, eyeing the thermometer.

The half-conscious patient raised himself on his elbow.

"Sell! Sell!" he shouted.

Why fall out with people? Do you expect an oak tree because it doesn't bear apples?

"So you figure my boy will be a big executive some day?"

"Yes, it always takes him so long to eat his lunch."

ANOTHER EDITOR WILL SOON MAKE AN APOLOGY

From Ashboro, (N. C.) Tribune

"On Wednesday afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30 at their home Misses Donna Lee and Mary Loftin entertained their bridge club with three extra tables of invited guests."

"At the conclusion the hostess served congealed vegetable salad, tomatoes, fruit cake, coffee and whipped cream."

"We always like those people who are kind to dogs and horses."
