Easy HOUSEKEEPING

By Mrs. MEO MACGREGOR, Director of Household Science

Keeping
the kitchen sink respectable

There's an easier
way to achieve a reputation as an immaculate housekeeper than by hours of scrubbing.

Some task that used to be, but not now! My drain-
board is a wonder.
I have learned to keep it white without scrubbing. I can take off all the discoloration and stains of a busy day in no time. I mix a solution of Clorox and with a rag wipe off the drain-board—quickly, easily. "No elbow grease"—no effort at all!
But a white and "sweet" board.

The dish rag too

Dish rags are a terrible thing at best. But kept white with Clorox they will be as fresh as a handkerchief. Just soak your dish rags in the same solution you make to wash your drainboard. They will be white and really clean—for Clorox disinfects and deodorizes as well as bleaches.

To clean tile

Speaking of drainboards, Mrs.
H. B. D. of St. Louis has asked me whether she can use Clorox on her tiled drainboard. By all means. Follow the directions on the Clorox label—all spots and stains will disappear.

Those discouraging
drainpipes

If there is anything more disagreeable than a sluggish kitchen drainpipe

I have yet to see it! Pair boiling water down the
drainpipe, follow
with a cupful of Clorox, and in a few minutes more water. The pipes will be as clear as a bell.
You're not only cleared them of "muck" but you've cleared them of all germs and odors, too. This applies to bathroom bowls as well.

A truly respectable sink

Now for the kitchen sink itself.
Why scrub watermarks, fruit and vegetable stains, and other discolorations that are a daily nuisance in your sink? The Clorox method takes much less effort and gives much better results.
Your sink will be truly respectable—spotless and free from germs.
