MANDELL BEATS JIMMY M'LARNIN

Westerner Unable to Match Champ's Skill But Is Game

By Edward J. Neil

NEW YORK, May 22 (AP)—The lightweight division still boasts the same old ruler—dapper, clean-cut, Jimmy Mandell—but if ever they award titles for raw courage in the prime ring Irish Jimmy McLarnin must be crowned king of them all.

For 15 rounds under glaring lights above a ring pitched in the center of the Polo grounds, the black haired Irishman from Rockford, Ill., slashed and laid late night at the body and chin of the McLarnin kid.

Lefts that shot out with the sting and drive of a whipstap hit about Jimmy's face. Short right elopes closed his left eye, lefts smothered the other eye, and punches from every direction brought a stream of blood from his nose.

Not a Double

There was not a dissenting voice in the crowd of less than 25,000 that gathered in the big National league ball park when Joe Humphreys announced that Mandell had won championship after 15 rounds of furious battling.

For every one of those 15 rounds, McLarnin, hoping always to land the smash that stowed away the ghost of the Ghetto, piled into a storm of punches that battered his features beyond beyond recognition. It was the attack of the youngster who didn't know what fear meant, a kid with a fighting heart that couldn't be slackened.

Jimmy's cause was hopeless in the face of the champion's power, when he hammered in to even the sixth and win the tenth. "Only a knockout could win the title after Mandell slashed and tore the challenger through the next three rounds. But then it was that McLarnin fought hardest of all to gain the fourteenth round and end his title try.

Did Too Soon

To critics it appeared that McLarnin, despite his sensational record and punching power, made his bid for the championship too soon. He could not cope with Mandell in the ring. He couldn't match his speed and at times his boxing ability was almost pitiful in comparison with that of the black haired Italian. Jimmy plans to wait a year before trying again.

When the battle was over and radio beamed the little holder who has defended his crown only two times in the world's first three rounds. But then it was that McLarnin fought hardest of all to gain the fourteenth round and end his title try.

The Boston Red Sox, long the butt of many a baseball jest, no longer are door mats to be trampled on with impunity by the rest of the American league.

After a fine showing against the invading clubs in the recent intercontinental series, the Red Sox came to New York yesterday, snapped an eight-game winning streak of the New York Yankees in the first order of a double header 4-4 and then saw their own
