Magistrate—"You say the officer arrested you while you were quietly minding your own business?"
Prisoner—"Yes, your worship."
"You were quietly attending to your own business, making no noise or disturbance of any kind?"
"None whatever, sir."
"It seems very strange. What is your business?"
"I'm a burglar."

She was still rather new at driving a car, and a little bit confused in traffic. Down Main street she forgot to stop soon enough at the signal and shot out into the middle of the street.
Pompously the traffic officer bore down upon her.
"Didn't you see me hold up my hand?" he shouted fiercely.
The culprit gasped a breathless "Yes."

"Didn't you know that when I held up my hand it meant 'stop'?"
"No, sir. I'm just a school teacher," she said, in a timid, mouse-like voice, "and when you raised your hand like that I thought you wanted to ask a question."

Fortune Teller, to young lady—"You are soon going on a long trip."
Young Lady—"Will I have to walk back?"

"I don't see how you can tell your father," said the motorist to the farmer's boy who stood looking at the load of hay upset in the lane by the collision.
"He knows," replied the boy.
"Knows? How can he know?"
"He's under the hay."

Political Speaker—"The farmer gets his living from the soil, the hickster from the wash-water."
After Jessie had been boarding school a few weeks she began signing her name, Jessica. Her fun-loving brother Tom, wrote in reply: Dear Jessica—Dadica and Monica went to visit Aunt Lizicka. Uncle Samka is buying a new machine, but he doesn't know whether to get a Ford or a Chevrolet. The old cow has a calf and I was going to name it Nellie, but changed it to Janica because it was a bullface.

Your brother,
Tomica.

Having incidents, glimpses of life in the dormitory, the society prom and finally the smashing, spell-binding football match with the tide turning against the home team, the star player disabled, the second best man out of the game and only two minutes to go, have strong appeal. At this point the temperature reaches fever heat, the fully begins to raise on ends, and just when it seems that we can't stand another particle of tension the hero rushes into the field and—wins the game.

Interwoven in this fabric are designs of humor, contributed by Ben Turpin, Churchill Ross and Joan Stanning; motifs of love, supplied by Dorothy Agnew, Pauline Garon and Rex Lease; and a friendship built up by hard knocks and great sacrifice, a friendship as enduring as bronze and one which will be remembered long after the picture has been erased from memory.

"The College Hero" is clean entertainment and may safely be recommended for the entire family.

AT THE THEATERS

"William Boyd" At Colonial Wednesday

Railroad bells, whistles and rattling horns recently supplemented regular studio signals at the Metropolitan studio, where Walter Lang directed "The Night Flyer," a James Cruze production for Pathé-DeMille, starring William Boyd, which will be on view at the Colonial theater today.

This is a railroad story and in order to thoroughly catch the spirit of the rails, Director Walter Lang had a huge locomotive bell on the set. When quiet was desired, the bell was rung once. When noises were allowed, it was rung twice.

Instead of "camera" and "cut" to start and stop action, Lang directed William Boyd, Johnny Italon and other members of the cast with a conductor's whistle. One blast meant "stop," two meant "go ahead."

In the story of "The Night Flyer," Mr. Boyd is seen as a portly, portly locomotive fireman who wins a mail contract for his company. There is a thrilling train wreck superbly photographed which is said to be most remarkable from a photographic standpoint and well calculated to make spectators cling to their chairs in excitement.

Phila McCullough has a strong role and with Ann Schaeffer heads an excellent supporting cast of players. The story was written by Frank H. Spearman and the adaptation was the work of Walter Woods.

"College Hero" Opens At Star Today

"The College Hero," which opens at the Star theater today, has something about it which appears to each individual and holds the attention until the final fade-out. This Columbia Pictures product, featuring Bobby Agnew, Pauline Garon, Ben Turpin, Rex Lease and Churchill Ross, depends for its success, more upon the human interest element than upon a strong plot. The film has for its purpose a picturization of college life as it exists in our American institutions and in that it succeeds admirably.

Tuneless Actors Play Songbirds In "Buggy Ride"

Glenn Tryon can't play a piano and Laura La Plante's singing voice is a rather uncertain one. Yet, in "Thanks for the Buggy Ride," which will open at the Arcade theater tomorrow the story is built around the ability of Tryon to rattle off jazz tunes, and Mrs. La Plante to sing them.

This is a high tribute to their acting ability, for both give the impression of being accomplished musical artists in the croupers. This goes to prove their ability as accomplished pantomimic artists. Mrs. La Plante's lip and throat movements are perfect. One cannot tell that the note is slightly flat. Tryon's finger movement is equally good, and his playing is proportionately bad.

While these scenes are doubtfully funny on the screen they were even funnier on the set when the music and voice could be heard. A horrible disharmony, purposely lost on the screen, gives the impression of professional singing with piano accompaniment.

Both players have scored their greatest successes in pantomime and they have combined their talents to make "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" a leading comedy. Mrs. La Plante proved a master of pantomime in "Silk Stockings" and Tryon in "Fainting the Town."

The supporting cast of this new picture includes Richard Tucker, Lee Moran, Jack Raymond.

LOSES ITS APPEAL

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP)—The Reed senate investigating committee lost its appeal in the supreme court Monday in its demand that the lower federal courts should have considered on its merits the committee demand for ballots and other papers in Delaware county, Pennsylvania, in the senatorial contest in 1926.

Having incidents, glimpses of life in the dormitory, the society prom and finally the smashing, spell-binding football match with the tide turning against the home team, the star player disabled, the second best man out of the game and only two minutes to go, have strong appeal. Favorable Report On Farrell Ordered

WASHINGTON, May 29 (AP)—The nomination of Patrick J. Farrell, of the District of Columbia to be a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission was ordered favorably reported Monday by the senate Interstate Commerce Commission. The vote was unanimous after half an hour's examination of Mr. Farrell in executive session.

Farrell, a democrat, is now general counsel of the commission. Chairman Watson the committee said Farrell had created a very favorable impression on committee members. He expressed doubt, however, as to whether the senate would confirm the nomination without a fight.
