CONVENTION EXPECTED TO PICK HOOVER (Continued from Page 1)
He got his first applause, a brief time of hand shaking when the chairman read the sentence endorsing the administration of President Coolidge.
Much Confusion—Scarcely had Smoot read two pages before Smoot walked to the runway and rapped loudly with his gavel, directing the delegates to take their seats.
Delegates continued to mill around, wandering up and down the aisles and along the passageways in the rear.
Senator Smoot read slowly in an effort to conserve his voice for the task of wading through the nine thousand words document which covered 57 typewritten pages.
The constantly rising hum of floor and gallery conversation which Senator Smoot had to compete with checked temporarily at least at a delegate in the Oregon delegation, not 50 feet from the speaker, told the chairman that Smoot could not be heard even at that distance, and asked whether something could not be done about it.
Moses hammered with effect. There was a real, sure enough cheer approaching the dimensions of a demonstration when Senator Smoot reached the plank commending the work of the department of commerce under "Secretary Herbert Hoover."

Hoover Demonstration—The delegates came to their feet at this first mention in the convention of the man whom a majority already had decided to vote for president. As the cheering continued, some one in the California state flag, with its bear and star, and waved it aloft while a man in the Texas delegation took up his state standard and started toward the platform in an attempt to organize a parade. But he resisted and returned to his place as Moses hammered for order.
The standards of New Hampshire, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland and Arkansas also were raised aloft by Hoover delegates in these delegations and waved backward and forward above the heads of the cheering crowd. The avation had been on for three minutes when the chairman finally rapped the demonstrators back into their seats.
Just a flutter of hand clapping greeted the prohibition plank in which the party is pledged to enforcement of the eighteenth amendment.
This plank was something new for four years ago the Cleveland convention contented itself with a blanket declaration for enforcement of all laws.
Recognize La Follette—Smoot finished the reading in one hour and 15 minutes and then approved the adoption of the report but Chairman Moses recognized Senator Robert M. La Follette who presented a minority plank. The Wisconsin delegation stood up and cheered and the youth of senator was given applause by the other delegates and galleries.

The young senator read his minority plank with vigorous gestures and in a clear, strong voice. La Follette met a real cheer from the galleries and some of the delegates when he read his proposed farm relief plank which declared for the equalization fee.
The senator finished reading at one minute past 12 o'clock after holding the convention only 26 minutes.
The La Follette substitute was then promptly rejected by the convention with roared volume of "noes" after there had been a scattering of "ayes."

Farm Plank Fight—This brought the convention down to the fight over the farm plank. Senator Moses recognizing Delegate G. H. Smith of Illinois, who presented the minority proposal. There was a howl of protest when Moses said Smith would be given half an hour.
After reading the proposed farm plank, Smith told the convention that in the resolution committee, he commanded the support of 15 states and carried the signature of a large number of delegates.
"The paramount question before this convention is that of a furnishing relief for agriculture," Smith said.
The Illinois delegate, an ardent supporter of Frank O. Lowden and head of the Illinois farmers' organization, declared that the farmers demanded "economic equality."

Recalls 1924 Pledge—Reading from 1924 agricultural platform adopted by the republican convention at Cleveland, Smith said that the pledge made then to the farmers of America for aid through legislation remained unredempted.
Smith wound up by saying that if the party expected the support of the republican farmers of the great western and middlewestern states "you are going to squarely and fairly meet this issue."

Smith asked for a roll call on the minority plank and then Chairman Moses recognized Frank W. Murphy, delegate from Minnesota, and who long has fought for farm relief legislation.
"Peoples, the McNary-Haugen bill is the issue within the party and you had better think seriously about it now when it is before you today. That is an issue you must meet head on and in a robust way. You cannot fool these farmers any more with platform pledges."
Cheers Follow—That evoked a round of cheering.
Murphy said the plank presented to the convention by the resolutions committee was only a repetition of the 1924 pledge.
"That pledge has not been redeemed," he shouted. "That pledge has been repudiated."

"No man has more respect for the president of the United States than I have," he said. "But here we have the choice between standing by the congress or by the president of the United States alone who vetoed the McNary-Haugen bill."

Poincare Given Confidence Vote—PARIS, June 14 (AP)—The Poincare government emerged victorious today in the first real fight staged before the present parliament which was elected in April, obtaining a vote of confidence, 342 to 167.

Water Rights Involved—SALEM, Ore., June 14 (AP)—Rights of 955 claimants and approximately a fifth of the entire area of the state of Oregon are involved in the adjudication of water rights on the John Day river and its tributaries, now under way, says Rhea Layer, state engineer. This is the last unadjudicated water system in the state.

Funeral Services—Funeral services for Charles H. Conkey, former resident of the Grande Ronde valley, will be held at the St. Peter's Episcopal church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock with the Masonic lodge in charge. Interment will be in the Masonic cemetery. The body is at the Snodgrass & Zimmerman mortuary. In yesterday's obituary an error was made in reference to Mr. Conkey's age. He was born April 16, 1864 and was 64 years of age at the time of death.

Eagle Highlights—H. T. Edwards, who as chairman of the convention committee is just naturally doing some tall hopping around to take care of the visitors, is especially anxious that the parade start promptly at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon and that La Grande folk co-operate in keeping the streets clear for the parade.

At 10 o'clock tomorrow morning E. W. Bigelow, grand lodge representative, will speak to the Eagles in an explanation of the financial status of the order. The ladies auxiliary members are given a special invitation to this meeting.
