for the ship and next week the expedition base will be moved eastward to Hinlopen strait, or perhaps even farther east or north. This would place the fliers within 150 miles of Foy's island and within easier striking distance of the marooned men.

When the large Swedish and Italian airplanes left Kings Bay on Sunday for Virgo Bay, everything was quiet in the little mining town. Shortly afterwards, however, the town was thrown into excitement by reports that General Noble had been saved and taken to Virgo Bay.

By chance a small fishing boat was lying near the quay and aboard this boat the correspondent for the Associated Press left for the north. The midnight sun was beaming and the weather was clear.

After six hours journey the correspondent arrived in Virgo Bay at Dane island. Sheltered within the bay was the Citta di Milano and close by was the plane of Major Maddalena.

The Swedish supply ship Tanja was near the shore and near it were two Swedish planes, in addition to second Italian plane.

Tells of Rescue—The correspondent was received aboard the Tanja cordially by the Swedish aviators and had a long chat with them. They told him simply and lucidly how Nobilia's rescue was effected.

On Saturday evening Captain Tornberg, leader of the Swedish expedition, in his large hydro-aeroplane, Lieutenant Lundberg in a small light Fokker 450 horsepower machine equipped with skills and Lieutenant Jacobson in another Heinkel, started on an expedition to save Noble and then to pick up Ceccioni, the motor chief whose leg had been broken and Professor F. Bohounek, George Slavion, who also had been injured.

The planes landed near Hinlopen strait where they renewed their supplies from stores established there and then proceeded directly to the camp, since it had been found on previous flights that it would be impossible to see the camp as visual conditions were bad.

From the air Lieutenant Lundberg discovered a place on the ice measuring about 100 by 200 yards and in this place made a skilful landing close to the little red tent in which the Noble party had been living for the past month.

The lieutenant spent one hour on the ice. Noble embraced him and then took leave of his five companions with whom he had shared 39 days of privation and hardships. Meanwhile other two Swedish machines circled over the camp. General Noble was deeply touched and wept when he had to leave his companions.

After the month on the ice the general had a long, black beard and his cheeks were hollow, while he was incapacitated by his broken leg.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge Drives 50 Miles to Patronize Beauty Parlor

DULUTH, Minn., June 26 (AP)—Mrs. Coolidge thrilled residents of Duluth yesterday by driving some 50 miles from Cedar Island lodge to patronize the beauty parlor of one of the department stores here.

Apparently wishing to take advantage of the first day of brilliant sunshine since her arrival with the president, she made the trip with her housekeeper and nurse. Few knew she was coming and it was a surprised cashier who looked up to see the first lady of the land asking the way to the beauty parlor.

Some warning had been given, however, and the store had been vigorously scrubbed and both No. 6 hurriedly tidied and brightened with a bouquet of tea roses. According to her appointment, Mrs. Coolidge was to receive a scalp treatment, shampoo, marcelle and manucure. She wore a dark gray tweed suit, a large red felt hat and a silver fox fur.

Word soon spread through the business district that Mrs. Coolidge was in town and police reserves were sent to the store to keep the crowds in order. Work was suspended in the office buildings in the neighborhood and windows were crammed with persons hoping to see Mrs. Coolidge as she left.

Business in the store itself was at a standstill. Women who happened to be there when she entered, refused to leave, as did those who came later and heard the news.

The sidewalks on Superior street were lined for blocks, and so many were standing in the streets that policemen rerouted traffic.

As she left, Mrs. Coolidge gave each of the three girls who did her work a bright shiny quarter and required, in answer to a request to return, that they would find her hard to get rid of. She indicated her return by opening a charge account.

Mrs. Coolidge said she liked the country and was enjoying the vacation at Cedar Island lodge.

Vienna Cabinet Expected To Fall

VIENNA, June 26 (AP)—Franz Dinghofer, minister of justice has resigned his post as an outgrowth of criticism regarding his refusal to permit the extradition of Bela Kun, communist to Hungary.

It is believed that entire cabinet will fall. The fiery communist who is being held in Austria on a charge of entering the country after having been expelled, caused a commotion in court today when he declared that the reason he had come in Austria was because the third international had cumulative proof that Italy and Hungary were preparing for war against soviet Russia.

Other countries would be dragged into this war, said the erstwhile communist leader and the "proletariat would be made fodder for their cannon."

Bela Kun was defiant and almost insolent in his attitude today toward the three judges.

said that Underwood of Alabama said a desirable man for the place. A new name was thrown into the presidential contest with the endorsement of Senator Barclay of Kentucky by his state delegation. The senator is one of the committee of five named by the senate to investigate expenditures of candidates in the presidential primaries and election. The Kentucky delegation is instructed for Smith.

Meanwhile, with new names still coming to the fore with newly arriving delegations, there arose a possibility that if Governor Smith were given the presidential nomination he would throw the race for second place into a grand free-for-all with the selection to be made on the floor of the convention.

Plenty of Silence—The tomb-like silence has hovered over the fair of Tammany in Houston from which have emerged only vague intimations that while Evans Woolen, of Indiana, and Newton D. Baker, secretary of war, under President Wilson, were favored by some of the Smith leadership, probably more of them were looking over the Robinson record.

At the same time there came still other reports that if their candidate should be given first place on the ticket, he might request the convention to select his running mate in an open fight on the floor.

Two Booms Launched—New humbles of thunder echoed from the central states and the west last night as delegates not yet used to Houston heat launched new vice presidential booms for Representative Rainey of Illinois and Richard V. Taylor, a member of the interstate commerce commission and a former mayor of Mobile, Ala.

Rainey, it was contended, has taken an active part in farm relief legislation and might do much to sway voters into the democratic columns. The Taylor boom came from the Arizona delegation.

Amos Vets, chairman of the delegation, said that Taylor was in harmony with the views of Smith on prohibition enforcement.

Hull, of Tennessee, still running large in the minds of many, today suggested Alton Pomeroy, of Ohio, or Governor Donahue of that state as candidates who would strengthen the kick of the democratic mule.

New impetus was given to the campaign of George L. Berry, president of the pressmen's union, with the publication of a telegram from William Randolph Hearst, the publisher, asserting that the democrats should take notice of him if they are considering the availability of the candidates. The message said he was popular both with union men and others.

Other new candidates whose names appeared on the list yesterday for the first time included Senator King of Utah, who was boosted by his home state and Ruston Thompson, a former chairman of the federal trade commission, whose praises were chanted by Colorado delegates. Still other delegations spoke of Senator Pittman, of Nevada, as a second place man, and Governor Ritchie, of Maryland, himself mentioned as a possible nominee for vice president.

NO TRACE OF AMUNDSEN OSLO, Norway, June 26 (AP)—Having completed a search of Barents sea to the east of Bear island without finding any trace of Roald Amundsen and the five others missing with him in a French seaplane, the Norwegian government steamer Sars today turned toward the west of the island.

BELIEVE ONE DEAD KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 26 (AP)—At least one of the seven men who were in the bag of the dirigible Italia and were carried off on May 25 without trace, is believed to have been killed in falling from a forward compartment. This was Pomella, motor attendant. Latest advices indicate that he was undoubtedly killed in the fall. The fate of six companions in the bag which was swept away from the Noble group on the ice is unknown.

It is further reported that the majority of business men at Arlington are not in sympathy with the efforts at that point to use undue persuasion in diverting traffic over the John Day, and in the light of this and other promising conditions, those present at the meeting close to minimize the efforts of certain individuals to flag tourists and induce them to detour over the John Day highway.

After a complete discussion of the many incidents of what was termed by those present to be undue and unwarranted propaganda against the Old Oregon Trail, it was deemed best to forget that
