HE DIDN'T HAVE GOOD SENSE

People have often wondered why we have been so very successful in selling so much building material, so much Monarch paint, wallpaper, Red Strand field fencing, sandpaper, and roofing material and we have never been able to answer this question, but we believe we can give you an answer now. You see, it's like this—my mother had 16 children and the big lumber man was the 15th child. I was relating that to a lady customer today and for the first time in my life I have really found out why I am so successful in selling such quantities of building material. The lady customer told me that she had always heard that after a woman bore 10 children that the balance of them never had good sense. Now that explains the whole situation. Everybody knows that your Uncle Claude did not have any better sense than to come to La Grande four years ago with an old broken-down 7-passenger Mitchell car, a small children to support and $550 worth of borrowed capital and your Uncle Claude did not have any better sense than to think he could start a lumber yard in an old horse barn and use a bed bug hive for a home to live in and as a lumber office at the same time. Now most anyone knows if I had of had any good sense, common reason would tell you that a man with as much brains as would fill the small end of a dwarfed peanut would not come into a city like La Grande where there were old established firms and try to build up a business with not enough money to buy a second-hand steamboat whistle, so to make a long story short I am glad I found out why we are so successful in selling so much building material. When you want to see a monstrosity come down and buy a quart of turpentine.

Bridge Pointers

By Milton C. Work

How many of today's questions can you answer? Score love-all.

Today's Hand

1. What should South (Dealer) declare, holding the above hand?

2. What should West (Second Hand) declare with it; South having bid one Spade?

3. What should North (Third Hand) declare with it; South having passed and West having bid one Club?

The Answers

1. One Heart. The worthless singleton makes No Trump inadvisable. In determining whether to bid a Spade (the highest-valued of the three strong suits), or a Diamond (the strongest suit of the three, but a Minor), the decision is given in favor of the stronger of the two Majors. After the Heart bid if North bid Clubs South would bid No Trump; if an opponent bid Clubs, South would double informatively. The hand is so strong that any initial bid is likely to stand; the Club strength may be divided between the other three hands so that no one has a Club bid. That is why it would not be safe to bid one Diamond. There might be a temptation to start with the higher-valued Major as to be able to show the lower-valued Major later; but there is little chance of any following bid except Clubs, and the Club bid can be handled just as well if the Dealer start by bidding a Heart as it could if he start by bidding a Spade.

2. Double or two Hearts. With three stoppers in the adverse suit and great strength in two other suits, a No Trump is very tempting; but the worthless singleton makes it inadvisable. Two Hearts might seem to be the obvious bid, but with a dependable partner a camouflage double may result most satisfactorily. If the partner have four Hearts it will produce a desirable Heart bid; if the partner bid with reasonable safety. Camouflage doubles should not be used unless their workings are thoroughly understood by the partner.

3. Double; a declaration which pictures the hand beautifully, although it does not show its full strength. Of course after the partner has passed initially, an informatory double requires greater strength than the minimum which would justify it when partner has not been heard from but this hand has two or three high cards more than the strength requisite for a double after partner has passed.

Better "Today"

Yesterday's fashions are not the fashions of today. Not only are fashions in dress constantly changing, but our daily habits and mode of living are subject to a steady process of evolution.

Conveniences have been invented and placed in use—and life is happier, easier for them. Every year, almost every day, sees some new thing of beauty, of use or for our pleasure, introduced. And they are invariably brought to our attention by advertising.

Advertising is the medium that is responsible, in large measure, for the rapid and constant improvement in our living conditions. Without advertising this old world would be a dull and dreary place. With it, we progress; we learn about new things that we need—to shorten our tasks; to make ourselves more presentable; to brighten our leisure hours. Spend a few minutes with the advertising in this newspaper. Keep up to "today."
