Bridge Luncheon Honors Wives Of Visting Doctors

A delightful bridge luncheon took place Saturday at the La Grande hotel for the pleasure of visiting wives who accompanied their husbands to La Grande for the meeting of the Eastern Oregon Medical society. The entertaining committee, of which Mrs. Lee R. Bonvy was chairman, was hostess for the affair. Covers were placed for 16 at an attractively appointed table in the hotel dining room at 1:15 o'clock. Sweetpeas formed a centerpiece. Following luncheon four tables of bridge were at play on the mezzanine. High score was made by Mrs. Thomas J. Higgins, of Baker.

The affair was a successful one, and had a major part in making the day a very pleasant one for the visiting wives. They were entertained at evening, again, at the Sacajawea Inn at the medical society banquet. This morning was spent in informal visiting and in rides about the city.

Those who accompanied their husbands were Mrs. J. E. Gregory, Wallowa; Mrs. C. T. Hockett, Enterprise; Mrs. A. H. Johnston, Heppner; Mrs. Goodrich A. Schauffler, Portland; Mrs. Harold C. Bean, Portland; Mrs. Thomas J. Higgins, Baker; Mrs. D. J. Dawson, Prairie City; Mrs. D. H. Blair, Prairie City. Other guests at the luncheon were wives of La Grande doctors. With Mrs. Bonvy on the entertaining committee were Mrs. Gregory, Mrs. W. P. McAdory (who was unable to be in La Grande), Mrs. A. L. Richardson, Mrs. W. T. Phy, Mrs. C. T. Hockett, and Mrs. A. H. Johnston.

MENUS

By Sister Mary

BREAKFAST — Sliced watermelon, cereal cooked with figs, cream, broiled fresh fish, rye toast, milk, coffee.

LUNCHEON—Vegetable salad, quick Parkerhouse rolls with cheese, egg lemonade.

DINNER — Baked fresh mackerel, scalloped potatoes, buttered new turnips, raspberry delight, milk, coffee.

New turnips are unusually good cut in dice and parboiled for ten minutes, then cooked slowly in butter and a few tablespoons water until almost dry and tender. Sprinkle with minced parsley before serving.

Raspberry Delight

Two cups red raspberries, 2 eggs, ½ cup granulated sugar, 3 tablespoons flour, few grains salt, 2 cups milk, ½ teaspoon vanilla, 4 tablespoons powdered sugar.

Mix and sift sugar, flour and salt. Add yolks of eggs and mix thoroughly. Heat milk over hot water and slowly add to egg mixture, stirring constantly. Cook over hot water until thick and smooth, stirring to prevent lumping. Let cool and add vanilla. Turn into a baking dish. Cover with an even layer of berries. Beat whites of eggs until stiff, gradually beating in powdered sugar. Pile roughly over berries. Bake twelve minutes in a moderate oven to color and bake the meringue. The oven should be hotter at the top than at the bottom or the baking dish can be placed in a pan of cool water to the depth of the custard. Chill and serve.

Bridge Pointers

Auction declaration, leads and plays may be either literal and obvious, or "conventional." When conventional, their full significance depends upon an understanding between partners; not a private understanding of course, but one which has been agreed upon by players generally, as the name conventional implies.

Few moves in the game are without some conventional significance. For example: an initial bid of one of a suit has the literal and obvious meaning that the bidder thinks it probable that, with average help from partner, he can fulfill the contract his bid offers to assume, if the suit named be the trump; the bid has the added conventional meaning that the suit named, or at least the hand as a whole, contains certain high-card strength. "Informatory" doubles are almost wholly conventional in their significance, although they also carry the obvious message that the doubler's hand contains considerable strength; and informatory doubles will be the subject for today, next Monday, and the Monday following.

As used when Auction Bridge was first invented, all doubles were literal and obvious, and were what now are called "business" doubles. Then, a double conveyed the message: "Partner, I think the contract can be defeated and I am doubling to increase the value of our expected victory." But it soon was found that it seldom paid to double bids of one—or even suit-bids of two. When the opponents could defeat such a cheap contract, they usually could have gone game with a declaration of their own and game is apt to be worth more than the penalty derived from defeating a low bid. More than that: the doubled side, warned of their danger, usually could rescue themselves by changing to a different declaration; and not infrequently they would be stronger in their second selection, so that the only effect of the double would be to steer the original bidders into a game-producing contract.

How these discoveries led to the practical disuse of doubles of original bids, and left some vacant rooms in the house of Auction declaration; and how these vacancies were filled by the invention of informatory doubles, will be our story a week from today.

Beige Leading Color, Woman Expert Finds

PARIS (AP) — Mrs. Margaret Hayden Rorke, managing director of the Textile Color Card Association of America, regards the establishment of beige as one of the outstanding fashion events of the present time.

Mrs. Rorke makes an annual business and study trip to Europe, spending considerable time in Paris. She is particularly interested in the number of yellow beiges now seen instead of the rose beiges which swept the field formerly. She attributes the acceptance of beige to the fact that most women find it flattering.

"I was much impressed," Mrs. Rorke said, "at Le Touquet by the costume of French colonial soldiers whom I saw there. This blue, seen also in the pastels of De La Tour, is second to beige in importance.

"Greens are third. Greens with yellow undertones are showing great strength for sport and for evening wear. Soft banana yellows are also good. The deeper registers of beige and brown are returning in favor. Wine and strawberry reds are a distinct trend.
