HEALTH

MILK AS A FOOD By Guy L. Keifer, M. D., Lansing, Mich. (Commissioner of Health, State of Michigan—Member of the Gorges Memorial)

In considering foods that come direct from nature, milk takes first rank. There is no element in any dietary that even approaches milk, when measured by the standard of its completeness in all food values. Many foods contain some one or other of the essential elements of diet in greater proportion than milk, but on account of this excess they require greater adjustment to make a properly balanced diet than is the case with milk.

The six food elements that are necessary to every well-balanced diet are: proteins, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins, salts and water. For the informed person who eats, and will choose a scientifically balanced diet, by utilizing all of these food elements, the problem of nutrition may be simple, but for those of us who have to choose with nothing more accurate as a guide than what we may happen to like, imbalance in diet is the inevitable finding. It is here that milk as a stable item of food shows up its best.

Not only is milk a balanced food prepared by nature, but any diet made essentially of milk cannot be an unbalanced diet. Children, being more sensitive to adverse or favorable health habits than adults, give the best field for demonstration. The child who doesn't like milk, but substitutes for its place tea, coffee, or soda pop soon shows the effect of this omission in stamper or growth. It is safe to go even further and say that a child who is having milk for the centerpiece of his daily diet can hardly be an undernourished child.

For growth, milk should not only be taken as a beverage, but it should be an important constituent in soups and gravies. Most children have a great longing for desserts. If desserts are prepared of custards and other wholesome nutritious forms of milk there need be no pan applied to the second or third helping of dessert. What

AT THE THEATERS

Don't fail to see Monte Blue in "Across the Atlantic," the Warner Bros. production, which is now playing at the Star theater. The picture is an aviation romance, carrying its hero overseas to France in a captured plane. Thrilling, dramatic, human, the picture is made to order for the aviation fan who stars in it. The story is by John Hanson and the screen adaptation by Harvey Gates. Howard Bretherton directed. The principals in the strange cast are Edna Murphy, Burr Melnick and Robert Ober. "Across the Atlantic" shows some of the earlier types of planes as well as the latest, and the presentation is convincing and absorbing. Blue at his roudneck best, which is saying the proverbial "mouthful."

Miss Logan Is Hit in "For Ladies Only"

A remarkably versatile actress is Jacqueline Logan. Gifted in comedy, inspiring in romance, thrilling in melodrama, and capable of rising to the tragic heights of the Magdeline, as she does with such compelling power in "The King of Kings," she seems capable of doing anything superbly. And to see her in "For Ladies Only," the current attraction at the Colonial theater, is to marvel anew at her resourcefulness.

In "For Ladies Only" she plays the role of the private secretary to the manager of a big business; a role, by the way, that she once played in real life. It is her job in the picture to be cast out with all of the other women employees when a new manager inaugurates a "Down with women!" campaign. These women may be out, but they are never down. They rise up to fight it out on the sex discrimination issue. And they make a jolly job of it.

Miss Logan is, of course, charming, alluring, vivid, and full of gently subtle comedy. She makes of the secretary a character of memorable beauty. And she has associated with her an excellent cast that includes John Howars, Edna Marion, Ben Hall, Temple Saxe and William H. Strauss.

The production was made by Columbia Pictures, under the supervision of Harry Cobn, and the direction of Henry Lehrman and Leo Pembrooke.

New Type Role Played by Clara At Arcade

Aside from uniting the star, director, leading man combination which made such a success of the epic of the air, "Wings," "Ladies of the Mob," Clara Bow's new starring picture now playing at the Arcade, is noteworthy in that it presents this popular actress in an entirely new type of role.

"Ladies of the Mob" is the first serious melodrama undertaken by Miss Bow since she became a Paramount star. It shows her as the sweetheart and wife of a savagely successful bank robber and depicts her efforts to get him to go straight and to keep him straight.

The picture was directed by William Wellman, who made such a success of "Wings," and Richard Arlen, who had a leading role in "Ladies of the Mob."

One West Coast reviewer, after a preview of the picture, characterized it as "the woman's side of the underworld." He called the picture remarkable in that it gives Miss Bow a distinctly new type of role without detracting from her unique personality.

EXPORTING DOORS

WASHINGTON (AP)—Millions of foreclosed open and close American doors as they go to and from their homes. More than 2,000,000 were exported last year, about 60 per cent going to Great Britain. More than 25,000 are swinging on front hinges in South Africa.

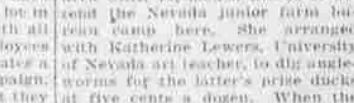

SEEING RED

HUNTINGTON, W. Va.—Five department trucks will be distributed on Huntington streets at night by one red and one white headlight.

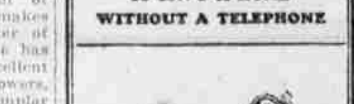

WORMS WAY TO CAMP

WASHINGTON, N. C.—Mildred Child, 13, tackled the 21 to 22 cent the Sassa junior fair's business camp here. She arranged with Katherine Levers, University of Nevada art teacher, to dig worms for the fair's better ducks at five cents a dozen. When the camp opened she had the money.
