Scouts Benefit During Period In Summer Camp

In a general survey of the results of the La Grande boy scout summer camp, held at Russell Scout, Eastern Oregon executive, this morning enumerated accomplishments that made the camp the most successful yet held. There were 84 boys in camp during the entire period, some staying for one period, some for two, and a few for three. In all there were 1,000 camping days by boys.

Figures prepared by Mr. Scott show that 1,000 tests were given during the three days.

A main achievement of the camp was that every boy who had not previously known how to swim learned to swim. Not a single boy left camp without having mastered the fundamentals. Mr. Scott explained, "Swimming was under the direction of John Elmer Allen, Red Cross examiner, who was camp director.

A number of added satisfactions to the boy scout council is that the camp "came out even" financially. Clifford Whitten, of Pondosa, who chosen the next fall annual campsite, the third division. He was a junior officer during his division.

MOSES PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO NOMINEE

The White House stands mute. When—for I seem to say—which you occupy it the people will know that it is in safe keeping.

In closing, Senator Moses said, "The convention has charged me to tender you this communication and with it I salute you as the next president of the United States."

The setting for Hoover's official notification and for the delivery of his message to the voters of America was of his own choosing, here among the hills where he won the first struggles of an orphaned boyhood.

Scene in Vast Bowl

The scene itself was laid in a vast bowl reached long after he had completed his own school days at this picturesque university and affording room for a crowd far exceeding in numbers any that has attended a similar ceremony in this country.

Surrounded by members of his family from this and other states, and house guests, the nominee spent the morning quietly, awaiting the hour when he and Mrs. Hoover would leave home for the stadium, a mile and more across the campus, late in the afternoon. Hoover's notification comes on the second day of his 54th year, his birthday having been celebrated yesterday with a series of conferences with party leaders and a family gathering at home after the had been an honor guest at a dinner given by the newspaper correspondents and photographers, who accompanied him from Washington last month.

To Leave Thursday

After his notification the republican nominee will remain here five days, leaving next Thursday night for Washington, from which city he will personally supervise the conduct of the campaign.

His route he will stop at Los Angeles for a home-coming celebration, and also at Santa Barbara, Pasadena and Long Beach.

From California he will go to Iowa to speak at his West Branch headquarters, and expects to arrive in the national capital on Aug. 2.

After attending a meeting of the trustees of the Stanford university in San Francisco next Monday, the nominee hopes to be able to make a motor journey into Yosemite national park. He also desires to make the trip with him back across the continent into the Grand Canyon of Arizona.

Save for the speech at West Branch, in which he will give particular attention to farm relief, Hoover probably will wait at least two weeks before making another set address, thus deferring until early September the real beginning of the campaign.

As the stadium gates were opened at noon, thousands who had come from far and near, some by airplane, others by train, but the bulk by motor car and foot, flocked into the bowl to find places to their liking. Some sat on the top-most tier of his 50,000 seats, others scattered about mid-way down the incline or behind the wall separating the seats from the broad green expanse of the football field, where there was standing room only.

They had come to witness the first spectacle of his kind in California and to hear the words most distinguished and most articulate the principles and the issues upon which he asks for a four year term in the White House beginning next March 4.

IDEA VOICED AT STANFORD CEREMONIES

Hoover had pointed the way to the new method of carrying them.

The republican candidate disposed of the prohibition question in the space of a few minutes, devoting approximately 200 words to his discussion. To the farm and question he gave over more than one-sixth of his address of more than 500 words.

Declaring that agriculture presented "the most urgent economic problem in our nation today," Hoover said the republican party farm plan consisted "in defining the rights of farm and stock raisers, in the detailed elaboration of legislation and appropriations to put it into force."

Favors Tariff Increases

Aside from federal aid to farm stabilization corporations, he proposed tariff increases to give agriculture the same protection as other industries and the development of inland waterways. Included in the program were the proposed extension of the National Irrigation Act, and the proposed extension of the National Irrigation Act, and the proposed extension of the National Irrigation Act.

Regards All Men Equal

For all he preached the doctrine of equal opportunity as "the right of every American—rich or poor, foreign or native, born, (respectively of faith or color)."

"Our purpose is to build in this nation a human society, NOT an economic system," he said at another point. "We wish to increase the efficiency and productivity of our country, but its final purpose is happier homes."

"The expediency is more than an administrative office. It must be a symbol of American ideals. The high and holy must be seen with the same eyes, met in the same spirit. It must be the instrument by which the national conscience is invoked and it must under the guidance of the Almighty interpret and follow that conscience."

Touche on Corruption

Turning to corruption which he said had been institutionalized in individual officers and members of both political parties in national, state and municipal affairs, Hoover said he declared dishonesty in government.
