WEST TAXPAYERS MEET AT BOISE

Dr. Fred R. Fairchild, Of Yale, Will Speak At Today's Session

BOISE, Idaho, Aug. 17 (AP)—Emphasizing the importance of regarding forest taxation as a part of the whole problem of state and local finance, Dr. Fred R. Fairchild of Yale university, outlined the activities of the United States forest taxation inquiry of which he is a director, in an address before the sixth annual conference of the Western Taxpayer's association here today.

"Plans of the inquiry include," he said, "a study of the tax conditions in all of the more important forest regions of the United States. Thus far such study has been nearly completed in the lake states region, covering Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan and has been begun in New England. The principal field study this summer is being concentrated in the states of Oregon and Washington.

"Essentially it is hoped that the report of the forest taxation inquiry may furnish a sound basis of facts and principles upon which it may be possible for the people and legislators of the several states to formulate improved methods of taxing the forests which will not interfere with the most economical exploitation of existing reserves of merchantable timber nor act as an obstacle in the way of reforestation of cut-over lands."

should meet in every reasonable way the needs and views of the other states in the basin in the final formulation of that legislation. The future welfare of all states touching the river is forever interdependent and it can be promoted only by a sense of common interest and justice to all sides.

The Colorado river basin is one of our richest national assets. The full development of its land and water power will in years to come be the scene of hundreds of thousands of new homes. Its outlet to the sea is through Southern California. Its development will bring added greatness.

"There is every reason for mutual cooperation in its development."

Golf Drawings And Handicaps Are Announced

The women's tournament committee this morning announced the drawings and handicaps for the second husband and wife tournament which will be played Sunday at the La Grande country club. Two-half tournaments will be formed and will play 18 holes, instead of nine. Fourteen are to make their own arrangements and may play any time Sunday as there will be no other competitive play for the day. Pairings of couples were determined by drawing from a hat at a committee meeting last night. The women are to divide off No. 1 and are to alternate on driving from the hole, the women driving from the odd numbered holes and the men from the even.

The committee also announced this morning that the first women's tournament will be completed in about two weeks and requested all women players to turn in four of their scores during the next week to the course professional, J. G. Renner, so that handicaps may be determined. The committee plans to work up to a ladder tournament, similar to the men's. This will be the first tournament in which the women alone have participated.

The tournaments and handicaps follow: Mr. and Mrs. John Thelen (39) with Mrs. Anna Polak and S. H. Crow (24) Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Kinzer (24) with Mr. and Mrs. William Skerist (25). Mr. and Mrs. A. W. term of office, were being straightened out.

Buck Testifies
A gloomy present and an unpromising future were outlined for the territory which would be traversed by the proposed cross-state railway when George W. Buck, commissioner for Montana country testified at the interstate-commerce commission hearing today.

It was a land inhabited by a few poverty-stricken settlers and dotted with abandoned farms, he said. The land could not produce much freight traffic even if the line were built.

Buck's testimony was given on the basis of a survey made in 1906. He said he went over the ground again last year.

William Ellis, attorney for the public service commission, which has petitioned for the road, asked the witness if it were not true that colonization follows railroad construction.

Owned by Big Concerns
"I guess so," was Mr. Buck's answer. Then he pointed out that most of the land was owned by big concerns. In reply to the suggestion that they were breaking it up and offering it for sale, he said, that might be true, "but I don't know what price they are offering it at."

"It is not true that the Yakima valley did not amount to much until the railroad went through," Mr. Ellis added.

"I don't know," Mr. Buck answered. He said he had been through there but could give no information about it.

Mr. Buck was one of the first witnesses introduced by the railroad. He testified that Pine Lumber manufacturers must furnish most of the freight for the proposed line and that their lumber was already valued over existing lines. Expensive changes in railroad yards would have to be made, he said.

New Method Of Color Picture Taking Invented

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 17 (AP)—A new method of color photography has been demonstrated here by Frederick T. O'Grady, its inventor.

"The process does not depend on a combination of two or three beams of colored light but throws the seven primary colors directly on the screen. The pictures are made of ordinary commercial film, utilizing only standard lens.

The demonstration was made before a group of scientists and newspapermen. The new process is called Natural Color Pictures, Inc.

As explained by Mr. O'Grady the color disc attachment revolving in front of the film behind the lens registers on alternate color exposures. These, projected on the screen at a speed slightly faster than that at which ordinary black and white pictures are run, alternate so fast that all of the colors appear to be present at the same time.

One of the movies showed a man peeling an orange, the color of the fruit, said to be one of the hardest to reproduce, showing up very realistically. Another picture showed a flag waving in a breeze and there was an overlapping or smearing of colors as frequently happened under the old processes.

mile from the scene of the accident saw the flaming boat and went to the rescue, but was too late to aid.

STORMS AND FLOOD CAUSE TEN DEATHS

Flood gates at Ware Shoals and other points.

Further up the Broad in North Carolina, danger apparently had subsided, reports indicating that Lake Lure dam near Asheville had withstood the surge of flood waters. Many small dams in that area, as well as in other areas of North Carolina collapsed without serious damage to the countryside during the height of the flood.

In North Carolina the two great systems of power dams on Catawba river, built after the disastrous floods of 1916 in that state, were receiving their first real test, and reportedly holding safely the 45 billion cubic feet of water impounded along the Catawba course.

Great Damage
As communication was restored last night and today, reports came in of great damage throughout the Piedmont areas and loss of life was believed definitely fixed at ten. They were Myrtle Young, 11, Hickory, N. C.; drowned; Guy Young, 8, Hickory, N. C.; drowned; Arvin Ellythe, Hendersonville, N. C.; drowned; John W. Jones, Ashley Heights County, N. C.; unborn victim, unidentified man, Ashley Heights, North Carolina; L. Marvel Blum, 16, Ariel, S. C.; drowned; Balleger Hudson, Arial, S. C.; drowned; Jesse Duce, Roanoke, Va.; drowned; A. A. Craft, Rockwell, Va.; drowned; Miss Ethel Allen, Warrenton, Va.; dropped dead of river while crossing Roanoke river bridge over flood.

LOCOMOTIVES OF HUGE SIZE TO OPERATE

The engine is built to carry 18,000 gallons of water and 25 tons of coal. The approximate weight of the engine and tender ready for service and fully supplied with water and coal is 250,000 pounds.

"These engines will not handle any larger trains than the engines that have been in service in this division for a number of years but will undoubtedly handle trains in much more economical manner," concluded Mr. Roberts.

The engines were designed by the Union Pacific and are consequently designated as the U. P. class engines. Their numbers are from 5700 to 9750 included. The locomotive is the same with improvement in the smoke which was shown here about 100 years ago.
