Under his arm reposed a portrait of Abraham Lincoln. Not that he revered the savior of the union, but he was answering an advertisement that read, "Just bring an honest face."

"Maid Mabel" paid $25 a dozen for those new photographs.

"But they don't look a bit like her."

"Of course not. What do you suppose she paid the 25 dollars for?"

A woman rarely runs away with a handsome man if she has to give up an electric dish-washer.

Basil: "Do you know who that sweet little girl is that I've been dancing with all evening?"

Gwendoline: "Oh, yes, that's mother."

"Why do you always ride slow trains instead of fast ones?"

"Because I got to ride so much longer for the same price."

A professional is an athlete who wishes he could prosper as an amateur.

"What is the rent on this room, including the use of the piano?"

"Well," suggested the landlady, "perhaps you'd be so good as to play something first."

When he forgets to kiss the wife every time he leaves she thinks he has several others around the corner some place.

AT THE THEATERS

Alice White As Saucy Midinette At the Star

Handsome "Maestro" McGrover and plump Alice White are delightfully cast in "Lingerie," a Tiffany-Stahl production in which a love triangle, the World War and some minor complications furnish a good deal of amusement. George Melford's experienced direction has produced a film which is continuously entertaining, and in addition to the featured players, there is a pair of luck players, capably played by Rex Guard and Victor Hotel, whose comic relief is really funny.

"Lingerie" is the story of a man who finds goodbyes to happiness and joins the American army in France as a private because an hour after his wedding he learns that his wife is in love with someone else and has married him merely for money. A little French midinette, played with charm and pliancy by Alice White, convinces him that his judgment of women has been a little hasty, in spite of several obstacles, at times apparently insuperable.

William Haines Coming In Comedy Picture

In spite of the fact that some of the loudest are said to be in China, William Haines' starring picture, "Telling the World," might truly be called the All-American movie for the entire technical staff of the production and every member of the cast holds the hand of the partially free as his birthplace.

In this era of cosmopolitan productions embracing a babel of tongues and a multiplicity of jaw-breaking names, the cast that produced the picture which comes Broadway to the Arcade Theatre, stands out as the best of American.

Haines himself was born at Stamford, Virginia, and a trace of the Southern drawl still lingers in his speech. Anta Stiller, his leading lady, is a New Yorker and proud of it. Sam Wood, the director, was born in Philadelphia, has never been abroad in his life and is satisfied that Hollywood is the best place in the world to live in.

Even Polly Moran, who has made her reputation as a player of Irish roles, was born in New York City, although she proudly declares her parents came from the "old sod."

As with the principals, so with the story. "Telling the World" is a distinctly American type of story exploiting Haines' character as a typical American wealthy youth. The situation and the comedy were designed by Yankee minds for Yankee enjoyment.

Lonely Man Takes His Dog Beyond

SANBERG, Cal., Oct. 3.—(AP)—A man and his dog were dead today after years of inseparable companionship. Argo, dog of the man, died at his home.

Death for the two came in a lonely mountain spot near where Argo trudged into this country 11 years ago seeking solitude. For years they lived quietly on the ranch of George Lake.

A few days ago he became ill. Then Luke noticed the 77-year-old man and his dog, a constant companion, were gone. He searched the surrounding mountains. Yesterday he found a dog propped against a tree, a dog with a bullet in his head and the bloodless body of Argo nearby. The old man had died and taken his dog with him.
