"Street Angel" Coming To Arcade Thursday

A fine Italian hand will be visible in "Street Angel"—several of them, in fact. When this new picture comes to the Arcade Theatre on Thursday cinema patrons will view an attraction that shows the Italian influence in more ways than one.

This latest vehicle for Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, adapted from the stage play by Monckton Hoffe, "Lady Cristilinda," is unusual in that it has a circus setting in the vicinity of Naples. There have been hardly any memorable pictures of late years which have dealt with the Latin shores of the Mediterranean, and "Street Angel" sets a new vogue in Italianate pictures, just as "Underworld" started the current fashion in crook films.

Aside from its Neapolitan background, there are more personal elements in the new picture with an Italian tinge. First of all, the picture represents a cherished dream of Frank Borzage, the director. For years Borzage has gone along turning out roundly acclaimed pictures like "Humoresque," "7th Heaven," "The First Year," and yet he hasn't been really satisfied.

The reason? Deep down in his heart he has always longed to do a silent drama localized in Italy. The reason for that? His Italian blood. Though Borzage was born in Salt Lake City, his lineage is of the old Roman stock. It would scarcely be guessed, perhaps, from his reddish-brown hair, which hardly seems Latin. Yet all the time that he was a property boy, then a stage actor, next a screen star with Thomas Ince, and finally a director, he has had lurking thoughts of the country that called to him through the fibres of his being.

Finally, when Winfield Sheehan, vice president and general manager of Fox, told him he was to do "Street Angel," he was delighted, not only because he was to handle Miss Gaynor and Farrell, his two prodigies of "7th Heaven," but because he was to vision on the screen the Italy that he loved.

"Ladies of the Night Club" Now Showing

"Ladies of the Night Club," the Tiffany-Stahl production that began its engagement at the Star Theatre yesterday, is the story of the Gay White Way, where cabarets have given way to night clubs, for the amusement of those who don't believe in going home until morning.

The particular night club lady of this story isn't a gold digger because she doesn't have to be—she's got a heart that's pure gold. She is Dimples Revere, of the team of Raggs and Revere. So far as the audience is concerned, she's the whole show, but to Joe Raggs, just a conceited "hoofer," he's the world's greatest unrecognized vaudevillian.

Dimples is discovered in a cheap vaudeville house by the "Mammy" singer of the Bubble Over Club, but she won't go without Joe. And how the boy suns himself in the limelight, but Dimples is sweet-natured and besides, everybody likes her—especially young George Merrill, who immediately answers the question of her song, "Has anybody got a kiss for me." Dimples hadn't been looking for an answer, and for the first time in George's pampered young life his kisses are repulsed, and at last he's found the girl he wants.

How he gets Dimples and Joe loses her makes a story that is full of color, movement, fun and heart throb. The cast couldn't have been more wisely selected. Ricardo Cortez looks rich and is romantic; Barbara Leonard is a roguish, dimpling, adorable Dimples; Lee Moran puts much humor and pathos into the role of Joe and Cissy Fitzgerald and Douglas Gerrard are perfect. The direction is in George Archainbaud's best and liveliest manner.

Clive Brook And Irene Rich In Mystery Film

Something unusual in mystery dramas is scheduled to open Thursday at the Star Theatre. The picture is an FBO offering, "The Perfect Crime," featuring Clive Brook and Irene Rich, and directed by Bert Glennon.

This production is said to employ a situation never before presented on the screen. The story concerns a world-famed criminologist who, bored with the ease with which he can solve criminal problems, decides to commit the perfect crime—to prove that such a thing is within the province of man. His own confession of guilt to save an innocent man forms the dramatic climax.

The story is by William LeBaron, vice president of FBO, and is based on the well known novel "The Big Bow Mystery," by Israel Zangwill.

In addition to the stars, the director has selected some of the most prominent names in motion pictures for important parts, such as Tully Marshall, Gladys McConnell, Carroll Nye, Edmund Breese, Ethel Wales, James Farley and Phil Gastrock.

Marian Nixon In Picture At The Arcade

A more apt and fitting nickname could not be devised for Marian Nixon by her friends than her present one of "Nixie." To those who know the petite screen player, soon to appear in "Jazz Mad," the Universal picture that opens at the Arcade Theatre today, it is a nickname that is peculiarly suitable to her.

The diminutive stature, the impish twinkle in her large eyes, her pert, yet refined air—things that impress people who meet her in person—are all suggested by "Nixie."

Miss Nixon's many charming accomplishments are partly the result of her long training as a dancer. For several years following graduation from the schools of Minneapolis, she studied the art of terpsichore with her mind set upon a stage career.

The ambitious girl soon landed a contract with a vaudeville circuit. Before long, she became known as a toe, ballet, eccentric and ballroom dancer of much ability.

Marian was satisfied. She has achieved, while still in her teens, great fame, although very little fortune. What more could one expect out of life?

The satisfied feeling lasted for only a short time, though. The vaudeville tour ended in San Francisco and Miss Nixon exchanged her return ticket to New York for a ticket to Los Angeles. Once in the environs of Hollywood, ambition returned to her with the long vistas of success that the screen colony opens to those who enter its gates.

A motion picture director gave her the first chance when she did a "bit" in one of his productions. That was enough. She rapidly received offers of other roles until Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, and one of the keenest judges of screen talent in the world, hastened to sign her on a long contract. The peak of her career was reached in "Jazz Mad," according to her friends.

Jean Hersholt, beloved character actor, is starring in the tensely dramatic film. George Lewis portrays an active supporting role. Others in the company are Roscoe Karns, Torben Meyer, Andrew Arbuckle, Charles Clary, Clarissa Selwynne, Patricia Caron, Alfred Hertz, and the famous Hollywood Bowl Symphony orchestra.

Always Use The Telephone Directory

Many times every day, telephone patrons call the wrong number. This is bad for everybody. If you've been called out of bed at 4 o'clock in the morning by "wrong number" you've been madder than a hornet and you blamed "Central" for it. And the one who tried to call the party got mad, too, because there was a delay.

HERE'S A SAFE RULE FOR EVERYBODY: Consult the telephone book. Don't rely on your memory.
