PEOPLE OVER THE VALLEY DIVIDED ON HOOVER AND SMITH

Prognostications regarding the coming election are rather dangerous things, at least, they are apt to be very incorrect," so said a prominent professional man out in the valley a few days ago. "Politics are so undecided in many instances, people have been changing their minds so generally, said another, "that it is going to be pretty hard to tell how things are going until they have actually gone."

"Had the election been a month ago this section would have gone almost 100 per cent for Hoover," so reported a prominent politician in the southeastern part of the county. "But within the intervening time, according to this gentleman, sentiment had changed and voters had wavered, and now unless the people change their minds again, Hoover will post a very small per cent of the vote. In fact they will not even accept Hoover buttons in this precinct which is said to be republican 7 to 1."

"It will be very hard for me to vote for a republican," said a woman who does her own thinking in a section considerably nearer La Grande, "but this year there is no choice. I simply cannot vote for Smith with a clear conscience. I believe most all the women on this route feel as I do."

"Smith will poll very few votes from the women of these four precincts," commented a prominent man in Union. "The women are stumbling over Smith's ideals, his attitudes, his ideas. The men like him because of things he has done and if they vote for him, that will be the reason, but a woman can't swallow some of the things he has done and more of the things he has said in this campaign."

"How are you voting? Well, my husband has been a life-long republican, I, a life-long democrat—but I will vote with my husband this time."

"Our section will go at least 400 for Smith," said a prominent man in one of the mountain districts. "I can't conscientiously vote for a party that has shown the corruption that the republican party has the last eight years. I am a registered republican. To my mind this is a fight between the democrat and the republican party. Some are for Smith because he is wet. Others are opposed to him because he is dry. Smith is the dryer of the two, and there are some for Smith because they are confident he is drier. There you have it. What is the truth? I have heard men betting one way or another, but I say no one will know—Oregon may go overwhelmingly for Smith, and Hoover may run clear away with New York."

"The ordinary voters are doing a great amount of thinking and while they are not bustling about it now, I believe on election day, they will go by the vote of thousands and cast their vote for Herbert Hoover. I believe Union county will give Hoover a majority of at least 1,000."

"From one of the foothill sections comes this: 'Dry democrats and dry republicans will go hand in hand to support Hoover. Those who believe in restricted immigration, in keeping up the bars somewhat against the influx of foreigners, (the majority of them decidedly undesirable) will vote for Hoover whether they be republican or democrat. Those who feel that as a representative of our government before the other governments of the world, we want someone with a little push, a little dignity, a little poise, a little courtesy, will undoubtedly vote for Hoover, for people are thinking and when they think they can't vote for Smith.'"

"The north end of the county will go for Hoover," said one farmer. "I would not say that much, for there is much of the gambler in the contest this year."

"From out in the lower district, 'We are surely sick of Smith's radio talks. All he says is tearing down Hoover or threats of the republican party, tearing down another's name, without attempting to build up his own. We have never yet heard Hoover over the radio during his time of broadcasting at Smith. We are democrats for Hoover.'"

"This section has seen a remarkable change of opinion since the candidates started broadcasting. I am a resident of territory adjacent to Imbler. Hoover has got many supporters and I would not be surprised if this locality went very strong for Smith."

"In a precinct in the northeastern part of the county the prediction was that the final would probably show a 25-50 vote."

"Hoover should get every farm or ranch man from a better near Cove, while from now on the farmers and ranchers say 'We won't get Hoover in the war, I had to get out the much improved food, how can you expect a farmer to vote for Hoover?'"

"Corruption in the republican party has been very repulsive to some of us and we cannot put our vote for that party," says one firm one of the smaller towns in the county. "We are a small community, but the thing that turns us may prompt others to other localities to turn. But you cannot tell. I would like to bet on the outcome."

"I cannot look my boys in the face and thank you for a Hoover day 'til so much of a honor to the state, and a credit to the club team or to have entered a prize winning calf or pig." The girls are quite silent over their standing.

Wallowa Farms Are In Need Of More Moisture

The weekly crop bulletin from a correspondent in Wallowa county shows that conditions in that county are very much like they are in this—work retarded because of shortage of rain. Conditions among Wallowa county farmers is reported to be as follows—

Farmers in this section are well along with their farm work at this time, and while the weather is very nice for this season of the year, further work toward doing any full plowing cannot go forward to any extent until more moisture falls. A little plowing has been done in some parts of the community, but reports from those who have been trying to plow state that the ground is very dry making it difficult to get much done.

Much of the fall sown wheat is in need of more rain, as many of the fields are only partly up at this time, and unless more rain comes soon many fear that some of the grain will not get up this fall. A few fields which were sown before the first heavy rain in the early part of September have come up quite evenly and has a nice start at this time. Range conditions have shown some improvement during the past two weeks, with the new grass getting a fairly good start in places, but it also has been handicapped by the lack of sufficient moisture while the weather has been warm.

Some of the sheepmen who have had their flocks in the pastures in the valley for the past several weeks, have moved the sheep back to the ranges again. Several of the small bunches which have been taken out in a hand are being ranged on Bear Creek, and reports from those who have sheep there, are that some very good grass is available on the range there at this time.

Farmers in the hill section have been quite short on pasture this fall, due to the fact that the feed in the fields has not been at its best, because of the extremely dry weather. Only recently has the grain which was sown out on the ground at harvest time shown any signs of starting growing.

Stock of all classes is not in as good flesh as at this time last fall when forage conditions were much better. Potato digging has been finished at the most of the farms at this time, with the yield in most instances being little better than a half a crop. Some sales of potatoes have been made locally, at prices ranging from $1 to $1.25 per hundred.

Some rather severe freezing has occurred in the county during the past few nights, killing down much of the tender vegetables which have stayed green several weeks longer this year than usual.

A SEASONABLE RECIPE

Vegetable Chowder
2 ounces bacon
1 medium sized onion
Cut the bacon in small pieces, put in a chowder kettle and brown. Then add the onions, which have been cut in very small pieces and cook until onions are tender.

Add the following vegetables which have been run through a food chopper—
1/2 small cabbage
1 small cauliflower
1 cup cooked string beans
2 medium sized potatoes
2 medium sized carrots
1 cup peas

The uncooked vegetables should be added first and these cooked until tender. Add the vegetables which have been cooked, 2 teaspoons of salt and one quart of scalded milk.

A driverless car injured eleven people the other day. Just think how many it might have hurt if it had a driver!
