THIS PUBLISHED WEEKLY is designed and printed in a style of modernity and simplicity with great care and skill. It is a true and reliable source of news, and its circulation is increasing.

"At What Age is a Man in His Prime?" asks an old. That depends on the age of the man you ask.

Weather used to influence the vote volume. Tomorrow we predict a tremendous vote even if it should have to be cast in the teeth of a blizzard.

Competency and the record of a job well done influence the thinking citizen at the polls more than all other considerations. Which is as it should be.

Don't forget to vote early. Vote in the morning hours if it's possible. Vote at noon or early in the afternoon if that's possible. Help prevent congestion at the polls the last hours of the day. A record vote will be cast.

The voter who would mark his or her ballot according to the dictates of prejudice instead of the dictates of good government would serve the country, state and community better by staying at home. Voting is a duty and a privilege, but the duty carries with it the demand for a fair and logical decision in the acceptance of that privilege.

Everyone is invited to hear the election returns at the Sacajawea ballroom election night. Announcement of national, state, and local returns will be made almost continuously after 7:30. The Observer, in addition to this service, will also issue an election extra, probably between 9 and 10 o'clock in the evening, and another more complete extra early Wednesday morning. Unless a very close election results, a decision on the nation should be possible by 11 o'clock or soon thereafter. Inquiries by telephone will be answered as rapidly and as completely as possible. Two trunk lines will be available constantly but past experience would promise a tremendous volume of calls, and we will therefore appreciate patience and brevity on the part of those seeking returns by phone.

WHEN THE RETURNS ARE ALL IN—

Tomorrow is the big day. After a campaign that has eclipsed all others in history, in interest, in energy, in business, and in doubt, some thirty-five to forty million people will go to the polls tomorrow and decide whether Herbert Hoover or Alfred E. Smith is to be the next president of the United States.

Which will it be? That's the all-absorbing question, and yet there are very few who expect anything except the election of Mr. Hoover. In the margin of that victory is the chief difference of opinion.

Expert observers everywhere say the upshot of the election is a foregone conclusion. Such being the case, it is conceivable that the "about vote" so difficult to estimate could throw the election to Governor Smith. Such a result would be unexpected but not entirely surprising, if there is a distinction in that phrase.

Many considerations point to a fairly close election, but an actual and sweeping landslide for Hoover seems not too far from the mark. It is probable that the Republicans will carry all of the doubtful states and break into the old Solid South for at least one or two states. It is more probable, perhaps, that the democratic majority will keep the usual southern vote and build up a republican vote with such states as New York, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, and Wisconsin.

Regardless of the outcome when all returns are in, we do not anticipate any extremely important injury or benefit to the country as a whole. The business of production, selling, and consuming will continue to be self-sufficient and sound to perpetuate our general prosperity. Both candidates are capable, progressive, honest. The country will hardly "go to the dogs" under the leadership of either.

ABE MARTIN

THE California election that shocked our life was apparently not in ordinary circumstances. No community is drier than an official, so that's rarely very dry.
