AT THE THEATERS

Tom Meighan Now Playing At Star

Thomas Meighan, in his second starring photoplay for the Cadco company, "The Mating Call," has two leading ladies. They are Evelyn Brent and Renee Adoree, both popular stars in their own rights.

Howard Hughes, president of Cadco, who produced "The Mating Call" for Paramount release, borrowed Miss Brent from Lusky's and Miss Adoree from M. G. M., after considering approximately 50 candidates for the parts.

"The Mating Call," by Rex Beach, is one of the most popular magazine serials and novels of recent years. The story was adapted for the screen by Walter Woods.

and the continuity was written by Ford I. Beebe.

James Cruze directed the picture, which was produced on a lavish basis, with expensive cast and extravagant settings.

"The Racket," Meighan's first Cadco production, is considered his best starring vehicle in years.

Exceptional care was used by John Ford, director of "Four Sons" the new Fox film now showing at the Arcade theater, to make all the details authentic. All the intimate touches of home life in the story by Miss L. A. H. Wylie were bound to catch the eye of the spectator because of their picturesque ness, and hence Ford had to be doubly sure.

Consequently Ford spent several months in Europe, studying the territory in and around the locale of that part of the story which required the greatest pains for accuracy. P. W. Murray, out of his wide knowledge of conditions on the Continent, assisted him in looking the ground over. Consequently the modest cottage which is shown in an early sequence of the picture is held to be as near true to life as human ingenuity can make.

The characteristic clock with weights for a pendulum, the old-fashioned oil lamp, the homely chairs, the sturdy table, the well-worn chests for linen and keepsakes, the plainly fashioned chairs—all these are thoroughly in keeping. So are the unusual costumes typical of the region.

The American backgrounds were also reproduced with the utmost care. An important part of the story passes on Ellis Island, and experts were called in to make sure all the settings for this were reliable. The whole production was pervaded with a desire to make it conform to actuality as much as possible.

NOT many years ago, the Snow Bogy's despotic reign was undisputed. Then winter was accepted as a time to be shut in . . . a season when countless hardships were inevitable. But now many communities have learned that the "Caterpillar" Tractor can change that state of affairs. "Out of the way," it says, and snow yields to resistless power and sure traction. Folks on the farm can get to town, children to school, doctors can make their calls, merchants suffer no stifling of trade, industries are unhampered. . . . the "Caterpillar" has brought the Open Road. In the early days of the "Caterpillar," it was known only as a farm tractor . . . then farm plowing was its big job . . . now snow plowing is one of its many fields of service, for the "Caterpillar" has proved its ability to do all sorts of out-door work "Better, Quicker, Cheaper."

Hoot Gibson Takes to Air In New Picture

Hoot Gibson has taken to the air.

Universal's famous cowboy hero has fallen for the air craze that is sweeping the country, and in his new picture, he temporarily abandons his horse for a plane. The picture is "The Flyin' Cowboy," which is now at the Colonial theater.

Hoot is thrown from the plane at an altitude of 2,000 feet, and he performs one of the most spectacular parachute jumps ever filmed by a motion picture camera.

The cowboy has become "air-minded" in other ways besides his film production. After flying for thousands of miles in regular passenger planes, he purchased one of his own. Hoot is now learning to pilot his plane under the tutelage of Hestland Henry, who is among the few screen players to possess a pilot's license.

Gibson was asked recently whether he planned to give up his horse and become an "airplane cowboy." He denied that he would, but said he intends becoming as proficient in handling his propeller-driven vehicle as he is in handling his horse.

This means that persons living in the vicinity of Hollywood are going to see plenty of daredevil stunts in the air as Gibson is one of the greatest stunt horsemen in the world.

In "The Flyin' Cowboy," Hoot performs some of the most thrilling riding of his career. The picture is packed with many exciting and comedy incidents amply satisfying both thrill and laugh seekers.

Olive Hasbrouck appears in the feminine lead. Others in the cast are Harry Todd, William Bailey, Buddy Phillips and Ann Carter, Heaven Eason directed.

Dispatches say Mexico is becoming quieter. Back to abnormalcy.

MOVIES AS MODELS

USED IN ART SCHOOL

CHICAGO (AP)—Students in the Chicago art institute are expected to get a new movement and vitality into their life drawings through the use of moving pictures in some classes instead of models.

The reason given is that the human being cannot walk across the floor twice in precisely the same way. The movie is without that weakness.

A man's reputation is generally based on what isn't found out about him.
