AT THE THEATERS

"Their Hour" To Show Sunday At Colonial

Coming to the Colonial Theatre Sunday is the Tiffany-Stahl production "Their Hour" with an all star cast including Dorothy Sebastian, John Harron, June Marlowe, John Roche, Huntly Gordon, Holmes Herbert, Myrtle Stedman and John Stepping. The picture was filmed under the direction of Al Robach from an original story by Albert Sherry LeVine.

"Their Hour" tells the story of a trio of modern youngsters, two girls and a youth and their up-to-date courtship. A young man is engaged as a shipping clerk in a large concern and shortly after engages himself to the secretary of his employer. He is brought to the young lady's home to meet her family and while there is introduced to his fiancée's rich and beautiful young cousin. The latter immediately uses her wiles to take the engaging youth away from her cousin. For this purpose she invites the young man for an airplane ride and there is a forced landing and a stop at an inn. The boy becomes so enamored of the rich and beautiful young girl that he is amenable to the girl's pleading for him to break his engagement with her cousin. Later the young man discovers that the girl is already betrothed to a rich young man of her set, and disillusioned he returns to his sweetheart, and recovers her forgiveness and entirely cured of flirting with rich and attractive young flappers.

Jury will turn him into a kleptomaniac.

A similarly humorous routine is shown at the end of the picture when the dynamic little Jewish comico gets "beated" and the shock brings back his brain vision—characters with the Cohen-angel, this time the winner when he chases the Cohen-devil out of Sammy's cranium.

More than twenty pretentious sets, including a gigantic torrid Roman city, were constructed for the filming of the comedy which was directed by Benjamin Stoloff. "Plastered in Paris" will be at the Star Sunday.

Former Champion In Picture "Beau Broadway"

There will be a tug at the heart-strings when old-timers who see "Beau Broadway" playing at the Arcade Theatre Sunday recognize James J. Jeffries, the grand old man of the prize ring, as the grizzled veteran fighter who clings to the traditions of the ring until counted out by the Grim Reaper.

Jeffries, whose popularity as a champion of the world never diminished with defeat, played the part in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production as a personal tribute to the late champion.

It is a far cry back to the days when Jeffries wrestled the world's title from the lanky Bob Fitzsimmons nearly thirty years ago and it will be with poignant memories of his former ring glory that those who "knew him when" will note the change in the old fighter.

Jeffries, now retired to his chicken ranch near Los Angeles, was persuaded by Cady and Miss Pringle to play the tragic role in the first of their new series of costarring pictures because of the realistic sentiment expressed in the portrayal.

And the heart punch Jeffries puts into his scenes is as powerful as any knockout blow he delivered in ring combat. There are tears in that sequence and Jeffries' understanding of the part he plays is Notwithstanding this large number of comedy situations, the picture holds a definite continuity of plot and objective, and is not "just a lot of gags and knee-crack titles pasted together" as many comedy productions are wont to be.

Among the "laugh-a-minute" sequences, perhaps the funniest are where Cohen, gassed in the trenches, is shown in a hospital scene. The film "lap-dissolves" into a "picture of the interior of his head where a Sammy Cohen devil triumphs over a Sammy Cohen angel and decrees that Cohen's war inon. Illiterates will waste their time unless they want to draw pictures on it. Really useful for that class, too, come to think about it. NELSON PRINTING CO. 12-8-11

videly emphasized in the sturdiness of his characterization. The story of "Beau Broadway" is one of the prize ring of today with the dynamic New York sportsman world as the background. Cady, as the typical man-along-town, is a tight promoter who promises the old fighter to take for his grand-daughter when death beckons. That this girl turns out to be a tight promoter and very pretty furnishes an intriguing twist to the story plot, and Miss Pringle, as the promoter's beautiful niece, furnishes complications that keep the plot moving at a swift pace.

In the supporting cast are Mrs. Carol, 1928 Wanabe Baby Star, Hugh Trevor, collegiate young actor who plays a boxer role, Monte Hankins, Kit Guard and Jack Herrick.

Channing Pollock, playwright, says theater audiences these days "check their brains with their hats." And, of course, Mr. Pollock, since just check their hats.

If anybody noticed how little Johnny comes right home from school these evenings and asks if there isn't something he can do to help mother?
