AT THE THEATERS

"The Sawdust Paradise" Comes Here Sunday

An intimate, behind-the-scenes romance of three interesting and humorous persons opens at the Arcade theater Sunday.

It's a Paramount offering called "The Sawdust Paradise," and you are charged to forget your own joys and sorrows as those of Esther Ralston, Hobart Bosworth and Reed Howes unfold before you.

After seeing "The Sawdust Paradise," we are convinced that those of you who like romance, action and well drawn characterizations will enjoy this picture thoroughly. It is different from anything you have seen, in setting and treatment.

Miss Ralston and Reed Howes are happy-go-lucky girl and grifter respectively with Hobart Bosworth as the need revivalist. First and foremost it is not a religious picture, though it has a religious angle. It is a chunk of life from the colorful world of a carnival girl. It capitalizes the present public interest in evangelism without treading on anyone's toes. It has the novel angle demonstrating how a girl with real showmanship ability uses a circus ballyhoo—steam calliope and all the trimmings—to put over an evangelist's meeting, and how she incidentally gets completes a great deal of good. Howes goes away and purchases a carnival for himself and Esther, and the original show with the new carnival and revival meetings opens in the same town. Miss Ralston, however, is so interested in her new work that she cannot go back to her old life. The climax comes with a fight between the rival carnival people.

Laurel Reed, who directed the picture, and George Mankor Waters, its author, both did excellent work. The supporting cast headed by Bosworth, Howes, Mary Alden and Alan Roscoe, was well chosen.

Prison Life Revealed In Picture At Star

An authentic detail of prison life, copied from the regular daily routine at a real penitentiary, was enacted at the Paramount studio in Hollywood recently.

It was the picture, during which all of the convicts are returned to their cells and locked in.

It was taken during the filming of "Forgotten Faces," a contrasting melodrama of society and crook life, which will show at the Star theater Sunday.

Convicts, marching in irregular order, passed down a long cell block, falling out as they came to their respective cells to be locked in by a trusty and a uniformed guard. Above the cell block corridor on a high guard walk paced other uniformed guards, armed with rifles.

Fifty extras, garbed in regulation convict garb, were used in this scene which was filmed in the tremendous prison set erected at the studio for this picture. Olive Brook and Fred Kohler, two featured members of the production's all-star cast, were also among the
