AT THE THEATERS

"Baby Cyclone" Feature At Arcade Sunday

"The Baby Cyclone," co-starring Low Coffey and Allen Fyning, comes to the Arcade Theatre Sunday. It is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, directed by Eddie Sutherland from the script based on George M. Cohan's successful stage comedy.

Supporting the co-starring team are Green Lee, whose Pekingese dog was impressed to take the title role of "Cyclone," Robert Armstrong, stage actor "Is Zat So?" James, Richard Carlyle, Nora Cecil, Robert Dudley, Fred Emmet, Carman Selwyn and Wade Boteler. F. Hugh Herbert made the screen adaptation.

How love flies out the window when a dog comes in the home is narrated in a film with many unusual gags and opportunities for novel comedy touches. Two romances are almost wrecked through the attentions showered on the pup before the love tangles are united. The only villain in this satire on modern marriage and society is the inoffensive canine pet. The women love it, the men detest it. When forced to choose between the men and the pet, both women choose the dog.

The original play used on this novel situation, was a comedy sensation when played on Broadway, with Grant Mitchell, Nan Sutherland, Natalie Mitchell and Joseph Allen in the chief roles. It ran for six months at the Henry Miller Theatre.

"Blondes By Choice" At Colonial Sunday

In "Blondes By Choice" which comes to the Colonial Theater Sunday you are guaranteed a vacation from gloom. It provides an hour filled with laughs and crammed with human interest. The comedy situations have been adroitly worked out by Director Del Ruth and his staff, which includes Clarence Hennecke, comedy constructor who devised the gags for two of Harry Langdon's recent comedies and Mary Pickford's forthcoming picture, "My Best Girl."

The humor, while it is legitimate fun and not of the slap-stick variety, is genuinely hilarious and will put you in good humor for the day. The cast is of a high caliber.

Star Showing "Night Bird," Starting Sunday

One of the largest, most spectacular and funniest fight sequences ever filmed for a motion picture is one of the many hilarious high lights in Reginald Denney's new Universal starring vehicle, "The Night Bird" which will open at the Star Theatre on Sunday for 3 days.

The fight, itself, is one of those hip-shooting slug fests which are the delight of all fans of fistiana. It is the attendant circumstances which make it so laughable. Thousands of fight fans were crowded into the huge Olympic Auditorium in Los Angeles for the movie making to see Denney and another fighter put on a battle jammed with thrills from gong to gong.

Denney, incidentally, was lightweight champion of the Royal Flying Corps during the war and has never lost his skill acquired at that time.

The fight between Denney and his opponent lasted for a week, reminiscent of the ancient battle to a finish which frequently resulted in battles of 50, 100 and more rounds, a form of combat popular during the last century. But on the screen, the fight makes a regulation bout of ten rounds.

While the actual fighting time on the screen is less than that of a ten round bout the men easily fought twenty rounds in filming it. Just the dramatic high lights of the battle remain in the screen version. In addition to the actual fighting many medium shots and close-ups were taken which help "put over" the fight in a way which is impossible in the film version of a professional fight.

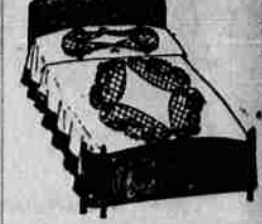

Betsy Lee appears opposite the star in "The Night Bird" while the supporting cast includes Sam Hardy, Harvey Clark, Michael Vlasaroff, Alphonse Martel, Corliss Palmer, Jocelyn Lee and George Bookasta.

Senator Curtis, commenting on the cruiser legislation, says it's hard to get 40 men to agree on anything. Just you wait, senator, until the United States Senate is full of ladies.
