Fay Graves, one of the six, charged that they had all been given an injection after they were returned to the home. They were then placed in solitary confinement on a bread and water diet. Other girls who were among the six said that Miss Haskew had seemed in good health when they were captured last Friday, but that all of them were sick and sleepy "after the injection." The girl was reported to have died of heart failure, but an inquiry into the death was started at the institution of her father. Miss Hertha Lips, superintendent of the home, testified at the inquest yesterday that the girls were given "twilight sleep" injections at the order of Dr. Evelyn Frisbie, physician at the home, after they had disturbed "the whole institution and it was feared that they might injure themselves." The inquest was continued until today.

Here and There In Legislature

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 16 (AP)—Glen R. Motzko, house member from Columbia county Tuesday morning introduced a bill which would do away with the secrecy of the records of the state industrial accident commission. The bill which would amend section 6511 of Oregon laws would omit entirely the following paragraph: "The records of the commission comprising information acquired by the commission from employers or employees pursuant to the provisions of this act shall not be open to public inspection." A bill which would increase the sum which county or juvenile courts are allowed to pay dependent mothers and which apply also to mothers of legally adopted children was introduced by Henderson of Multnomah county. The increase would be optional and not mandatory. When Sam A. Koser, state budget director, appeared before the Ways and Means committee last night and undertook to go through the ponderous state budget, explaining it to the members from item, he found himself, after talking about an hour, enmeshed in a tangle of questions fired at him by the skeptical legislators. A bill between Koser and Senator Strayer, in which most of the titling was done by Strayer, was the first clash of the first committee meeting of the session. Strayer's sharp eyes fell upon a recommended appropriation which appeared to be in a jump sum rather than in classifications. "Don't you know, Mr. Koser," roared Strayer, "that the Oregon legislature for the last 10 years to my knowledge has been trying to get away from this sort of thing, and I can't see that you have any business to come thrusting it before this committee again." Koser defended it as being in accord with the ideas of Governor Patterson, and said it was approved by the attorney general. State officials, he declared, would have more freedom in the use of their funds and at the same time could effect more economy.

The house of representatives Wednesday consented to the sustaining of the governor's veto of house bill 494 passed by the 1927 session of the state legislature, which would allow county treasurers to invest in county bonds, municipal bonds and school district bonds, only after Brigg of Jackson county assured the house that the Jackson county delegation is preparing a bill which will lift the present restrictions on investment of the county funds.

HOOPER WILL DELVE INTO PROHIBITION (Continued from Page 1) from the national and state party leaders since both of the senators from New York are democrats. From circles close to the president-elect the information has come that Mr. Mills probably will succeed Andrew W. Mellon as secretary of the treasury when the veteran Pennsylvanian retires after perhaps two more years of service. Mr. Hoover had a rapid succession of conferences with senators and representatives. One of his early callers was Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, who predicted a harmonious special session of the first congress. He said he predicted this upon his belief that there was general satisfaction with the farm relief ideas of the president-elect.

burnt sugar ADDED to gravies Philadelphia woman gives recipe popular with men A PHILADELPHIA woman runs a restaurant that is very popular with men at lunch and dinner time. The black liquor in small quantities is a wonderful cure for sores and 'pale' gravies. Keep a bottle of it on hand; Use a cheap pan, as charred sugar is hard to remove. No other ingredient adds so much to the enjoyment of other foods as sugar. Sugar is perfection as a condiment. A careful, delicious cookery revolves around sugar. Sugar is the inexpensive food, and to be well nourished is necessary to health. Medical authorities are issuing warnings about the dangers of starvation diets. Too much reducing often results in permanent injuries. To be undernourished is to place yourself at the mercy of diseases such as typhoid, pneumonia, influenza and colds. 'Keep children and young people well nourished and up to weight,' says a famous doctor, as a guard against tuberculosis. Eat beautiful foods. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. Backaches and Spinal Adjustments The seat of a backache is the foundation of the back—the spinal column. This does not refer to the one-day backache that follows unusual exertion, such as spading up the garden, but to the persistent nagging, painful, backache that hangs on, seemingly without reason. To be rid of such a backache, get rid of the cause by having the spinal column restored to normal alignment by chiropractic spinal adjustments.
