

WALLOWA SEEKS PUREBRED STOCK

Bull Calves Secured By Many Farmers; Others Expect to Buy

By G. C. Meek
(Observer Correspondent)
WALLOWA, Ore., (Special)—No small amount of interest has been displayed in this community on the matter of securing purebred bull calves for future use in the beef herds of this section. C. A. Hunter, who is one of the largest cattlemen of the county, and who has made a specialty of growing purebred bulls for both local and outside markets, returned from Dayton, Wash., during the past week with five young bulls of the Hereford breed which he purchased from stockmen of that section. At the same time Fred Weinhart and E. H. Sherod each secured a Hereford bull each from the same man. In addition to these Mr. Weinhart also brought home a coming three-year-old bull of the milking short-horn type, which tips the scales at 1500 pounds. A number of other stock owners of this section are said to be contemplating purchases of young bulls from outside breeders, feeling that in this way all chances for getting stock which is in any way related to their present herds will be entirely eliminated. Much of the cattle of this section are still being fed mostly on straw and pasture, with the exception of young stuff which in most instances are on hay.

All former records for good roads in all sections of the county have been surpassed with conditions which make good winter roads possible here so far into the winter season. Although the ground in the higher sections of the county is covered with six and eight inches of snow there has been almost a complete absence of wind storms to cause any drifts and cars are in use on many of the roads in the hills. Elmer Southwick, rural carrier on route No. 1 from here on the valley and through the hill sections covering the Leap section, is still using his car for making his trips and is able to make almost as good time as during the summer months. This is the first season since cars have been in general use on the farms that farmers have been able to make their weekly trips into town from practically any section of the county. Shredding is also quite good on most of the roads giving farmers an excellent chance of hauling up the year's supply of wood and so on.

According to information received by farmers in this community, W. H. Gokeler, of La Grande, who is engaged in doing field work for the state grange, will spend the first of this week here in the interest of grange insurance work and re-organization of local granges which are in need of help.

T. O. Feagins, of the upper Whiskey creek district, was a business visitor in town the last of the week. Mr. Feagins reports winter conditions ideal in the timbered sections with only a small amount of snow at this time.

A shipment of four cars of stock composed mostly of hogs was sent out on Saturday's freight by the Wallowa county marketing association. Ed Hook, of Midway valley, one of the directors of the association, accompanied the shipment to Portland. Despite the fact that the association has met with some string competition from some quarters during the past few months, the volume of co-operative shipments continue to increase. This condition, in the opinion of many members, indicates that the state has been made in the right kind of a way and that the movement bids to be a big success.

Bruce Fisher, accompanied by Colon Heskett, drove a band of Mr. Fisher's horses to Hurricane creek last week where he will keep them on straw for the next few weeks. Straw stalls have been much in demand for use in feeding some of the surplus horses of the community. However, no large amount of straw is found for sale because during the past few years the old method of binding and threshing has given away largely to the combines and but few of the farmers make a practice of cutting and stacking much of the straw.

E. A. and Wm. Downing, of Leap, have been cutting wood recently. A dance was given at the T. J. Ellege home on Dry creek Saturday night and according to reports from those attending a very enjoyable time was had. L. W. Minor and George Cussons have been hauling logs from Whiskey creek for their year's supply of wood.

Stock water still continues to be quite scarce at some of the farms in the hill sections. Moisture from a recent thaw does not appear to have run very deep into the ground.

You'll Eat This Bread

---Because You'll Like It.

There are many things a person will eat because they're good for them. That's commendable.

But with bread — a food we must have, being second only in importance to milk — it's different.

For McWilliam's Butter-Nut bread is not good for one to eat, but is delightful. It combines appetizing freshness with its health building properties.

You can eat Butter-Nut bread at every meal and it will not become monotonous.

The Bread Line

Thrift is all right, and so is mince pie.

But too much of either isn't entirely good for one's finances or one's digestion.

Too much thrift means sacrificing on essentials. That's not a good idea. Also too much thrift means a sacrifice in quality.

In fact, when thrift is practiced to that extent it refuses to be thrift. Bread of poor quality is not a thrifty purchase, even though bought at a low price.

When you buy Butter-Nut bread you are practicing thrift. You get your full money's worth in every loaf—you pay for food value and you get it. That's real thrift.
