

Parachute Fails And Girl's Dive Ends in Death

NEWHALE, Cal., Jan. 25 (AP)—The tragic death of a girl parachute jumper, Leta Wickhart today had halted production of an aerial motion picture, in which Ruth Elder, aviatrix and foot Gibson, screen cowboy were being featured. The 23-year-old girl met a swift death on her 14th parachute leap yesterday when her parachute failed to open after leaping into space 2,000 feet above ground. She was being filmed as part of an adventure picture, in which movie fans later were to see the heroine leap safely from the clutches of an aerial kidnaper. The girl's husband, Floyd Bowman, along with the stars and other players "on location" was a horrified witness of the tragedy. To Bowman, a veteran of 806 professional parachute leaps, Miss Wickhart was a bride as well as a companion in a thrilling and perilous livelihood. Bowman himself had inspected his young bride's parachute before she went up. Her mangled body landed in Wiley canyon, five miles west of here on the movie "location" site. Officials of the Universal Film corporation reported that examination showed Miss Wickhart had failed to pull the ring that would have released the life saving silken bar.

Eating Breakfast In Question Mark

Back and forth swept "The Question Mark" between Los Angeles and San Diego. Every so often it took on fuel. Only 15 feet directly above "The Question Mark" flew a fueling plane. From this plane dangled a thin rubber hose. While the plane zoomed at 75 miles an hour the pilot of "The Question Mark" reached out, grabbed the hose, thrust it into the tanks and took in gallons of fuel. It was an amazing achievement for the Fokker monoplane—but how about the pilots and passengers? They had to have fuel also and what did they have? The ladder was stocked at the start with roast chicken, but soon the searing ropes conveyed shredded wheat and oranges—vitamin B and vitamin C. Shredded wheat because it is light, full of concentrated nutrition, and ready-cooked. They didn't have to make a fire to cook it. Oranges because they are rich in vitamin C—the vitamin that is necessary to maintain normal health, vigor and stamina.

Here and There In Legislature

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 25 (AP)—A deficiency appropriation bill, appropriating nearly $150,000 to meet immediate expenses of the state departments and other state expenses listed as house bill 129, was passed by the house Thursday afternoon. In addition to the emergency bill, house members passed a bill authorizing the state game commission to pay $1200 during the coming biennium to Mrs. Gertrude J. Denny. Six bills repealing and amending existing statutes were passed and three new bills were given first reading. Mrs. Gertrude J. Denny, widow of the late Judge O. N. Denny, imported the first Mongolian or Chinese pheasants into the state of Oregon at her own expense. She is now 82 years old and one of the few remaining survivors of the Whitman massacre. The past four legislatures have made similar requests for Mrs. Denny.

House bills 65, 68, 109, 116 and 126, all repealing obsolete sections of the state statute books, were passed without comment. Senate bill 4, repealing sections of laws relating to mining claims in conflict with federal statutes was also passed by the house Thursday afternoon.

House bill 123, which provided that an alien may become a notary public if he has duly declared intentions of becoming a citizen and received his first naturalization papers, was indefinitely postponed.

House bill 229, introduced by Anderson of Multnomah, limits working hours for licensed pharmacists to nine a day, would limit the number of hours at work in two weeks time to 108 and would make it unlawful for a pharmacist to be employed for more than 13 consecutive days without a full day off.

A bill specifically outlining requirements to be met by every milk dealer in the state with penalties of fines and imprisonment for violation, is being considered by the house committee on food and dairy products and will be dropped into the house hopper as soon as a few disagreements on provisions of the bill are ironed out between committee members and the state dairy and food commissioner, J. D. Mickle, originator of the bill. Mickle's bill is similar to milk dealer's law in effect in Portland and Salem. Members of the committee, however, have removed from the bill the proviso that containers must remain in steam for 20 minutes. This would scrap a number of bottle washing machines now in use by milk dealers.

The bill classifies milk as raw, pasteurized and certified, and specifies the bacterial count necessary. It describes the conditions of light, ventilation, and cleanliness required in rooms where milk is handled and stored. It requires a separate milk house and states that milk is not to be strained in the stable. It requires that the milk house be supplied with steam for sterilization. Power is also given the commissioner to require a physical examination by a reputable physician of any person engaged in handling milk, who is suspected of having contagious disease.

Justice courts and district courts are given concurrent jurisdiction with circuit courts in enforcing the law. Mickle's bill provided for a fine from $10 to $1000 and imprisonment but the committee have pruned the fine from $10 to $500 and have taken off the imprisonment penalty for first offenses.

The Multnomah delegation introduced a senate bill Thursday providing for an increase in salary for constables in Multnomah county from $200 to $275 a month.

Senator Moser and Representative Anderson introduced a joint memorial to congress that would restrict immigration from Mexico by placing it on the same quota basis as that imposed on other nations.

Wall Paper French Idea
The making of wall paper, in its origin, was a characteristically Parisian craft. It began at the end of the sixteenth century with the making of marble or illuminated papers used to line small boxes or chests, and later these were used for decorating walls.
