Radio Causing Many Changes In Music World

What is the biggest field now for young men and women who are trained musicians, who have graduated at conservatories and schools of music? J. H. Ellison, of Portland, answers that, the coming field and the very wide field which is already here is that of radio.

While the radio has gone a long way towards eliminating the concert, recital and chautauqua performer, who the American public has known for so long, it has substituted another market. The change is therefore not alarming, he says, radio entertainment is perpetual and therefore calls for many artists. The fact is, more money is being spent on musical public entertainment now than ever before, Mr. Ellison asserts.

The constant change of public has been watched by Mr. Ellison, who is of the Ellison-White conservatory and lycium bureau in Portland, for the last 32 years.

Mr. Ellison first entered the lycium field in 1887. His mother was a music teacher and at Dexter college in Nebraska he became interested in lycium entertainment and began his career in that field. In 1911 the Ellison-White chautauqua and lycium company was organized in Portland and in 1918 the conservatory was opened.

The radio has wrought a change in another way in the Ellison-White bureau too, Mr. Ellison remarks. The bureau now concentrates on its sponsorship of celebrities. That is where the public taste for entertainment is strongest. People will travel a long way to hear a celebrity—a person they have read and heard about. The booking engagements of the bureau in Portland now consist mainly of that phase of public entertainment, he says.

KILLERS' CAR IS FOUND TODAY IN CHICAGO GARAGE

automatic pistol were found in the garage.

The owner of the garage, located by the head of "Little Sicily" in Leo Joppet, who operates a grocery store. He told of renting the garage on February 12—two days before the gang killing—to a "Mr. Rogers" who said he wanted it for a month and paid in advance.

"Rogers" gave his address as 1547 West North avenue, which was found yesterday. That address, however, is next door to "The Circus" cafe, a favorite hangout, police said, for those who follow the leadership of Al Capone. It is across the street from the home of Pasquino Lelordio, slain successor to the Sicilian gang leadership following the slaying of Tony Bonmarzio, part of the gang.

"The Circus" was raided two weeks ago and a machine gun was found. Police returned last night and made several arrests.

Persons living near the Joppet took it to the balcony. The same Bible is used at inaugurations to this day.

Many Notables There— Alexander Hamilton, Baron von Steuben and other notables stood by as Washington took the oath and kissed the book. Then Chancellor Livingston, in a loud voice, cried, "Long live George Washington, president of the United States!" The crowds in the street below cheered loudly, bells were rung, and a battery of artillery began firing a salute of 13 guns.

Washington stepped inside the building and delivered his inaugural address — not to the assembled crowds, but to the Senate chamber, where only members of Congress heard the speech.

Following this, the president and the congressmen went to St. Paul's church to attend divine worship.

No Inaugural Ball— That ended the inaugural. Martha Washington had not accompanied Washington to New York, so there was no inaugural ball.

Many sturly Democrats of the day objected to the proceedings as too formal, and smacking of monarchy. There were also men who objected, on the same principle, to Washington's wearing a sword. And Livingston's cry, "Long live George Washington," sounded to some too much like the English cry of "Long live the king."

In all of this ceremony there surely was not much that resembles the ceremony in which Hoover will be the principal figure. There were soldiers, there was a public taking of the oath and kissing of the Bible, there was a speech—but that's about the extent of the similarity.

garage told of strange goings and comings during the past week, but none apparently had taken particular notice of the men.

Joppet was taken to the identification bureau where he sought to find a picture of "Mr. Rogers" in the rogues' gallery. Police would not say what the result of the visit was.

Whatever effort the discovery of the killers' car may have upon previous theories concerning the murders, police pointed out that it widened the circle of persons who had seen the slayers, and provided a much broader scope for investigation.

dional interests, in-so-far as the use of the studios and technical experts are concerned, these two companies will undoubtedly be able to produce the very best in the way of synchronized and dialogue pictures, it is said.

Includes Many Stars.— In the way of stars, these two companies have a list that looks like "Who's Who in Hollywood." Warners have in their line-up such people as Al Johnson, John Barrymore, Lionel Barrymore, Monte Blue, Thomas Meighan, George Arliss, Dolores Costello, Fannie Brice, Conrad Nagel, Audrey Fields, David Lee, Pauline Frederick, Rexa Gaman, Sophie Tucker and many others that space will not permit mention of. First National will present such stars as Colleen Moore, Richard Barthelmess, Corinne Griffith, Billie Dove, Milton Sills and others.

The La Grande Theaters, Inc., is expecting to hear any day that the date of installation of the Western Electric sound reproducer has been advanced and when that equipment is in, the theaters assure the people of this community that an era of first class entertainment will start.

INAUGURATION OF FIRST PRESIDENT RECALLED TODAY

which he passed staged a program in his honor.

Finally he reached Elizabethtown, N. J., where New York's reception committee awaited him. There was a banquet, followed by a review of troops; then the party moved to a boat and was conveyed to New York. He was met by all city and state dignitaries and escorted in state to the house that had been chosen for his residence.

The Inaugural day dawned clear, and all the clergy held services in the churches to pray for the safety of the president. Promptly at noon Washington headed the procession to the federal building—a three-story brick building on Wall street, which was the seat of the government in the early days of the republic.

Dressed in a suit of dark brown broadcloth, with knee breeches and silk stockings, with his hair powdered and with a sword at his side, Washington entered his carriage and was driven to the federal building. There he mounted to a balcony, where the ceremony was to take place.

But there was a last-minute hitch: Chancellor Robert Livingston, who was to administer the oath, had forgotten to obtain a Bible. There was a hurried search; finally someone remembered there was a Masonic lodge room nearby, and Chancellor Livingston hurried there, got the lodge's Bible, and
