"Well, my boy, when I went to school it was just an oak paddle!"

"Poor man!" ejaculated the prison visitor. "I wish I could do something to get you out of here."
"Well, mum," suggested the convict hopefully, "if you wouldn't mind changing clothes with me."

Young Washington Bandit and Arsenal

Two states are interested in the alleged crime career of Eddison Shoop, Jekyll-Hyde 16-year-old high school boy of Lynden, Wash., facing charges of assault with a deadly weapon to commit murder after a gun battle at Vallejo, Cal. A portion of his arsenal is shown in this picture, weapons and ammunition he had acquired since fleeing from Lynden after being suspected of robberies in that vicinity.

AT THE THEATERS

"Flying Luck" Now Showing At Colonial

Monty Banks was the winner of the stakes in a certain aviation race which had been under way in Hollywood for the past two months.

When Lindbergh popularized transoceanic flights, motion picture companies worked day and night on aviation films; both melodramas and comedies, in a friendly rivalry to see which would be finished first.

Monty Banks achieved this distinction when the cameras ceased to grind on his aviation comedy, "Flying Luck," a feature release showing now at the Colonial theater.

However, Monty had the drop, so to speak, on his competitors in the raw-stock to silver-screen race. The Pathe comedy star, who is continuously on the lookout for novel ideas which he may introduce to the public, decided several months ago that the time was ripe for an aviation comedy, and began to write one in collaboration with Charles Turhan and Matt Taylor, two well-known comedy writers.

The story had been completed, the scenario partially written and production plans begun before the Lindbergh flight was announced. About the middle of June, Monty began actual work before the camera under the direction of Herman Raymaker.

When the guard ain't looking, I could do de rest."

Half of our lives are spent talking to people about other people.

"Oh, papa, I saved three cents today. I ran all the way to school behind the street car."

"For shame, Abner, you should have run behind a bus and saved a dime."

Little Alfred: "Mother, did you say that baby sister was sent down from heaven?"
Mother: "Yes, dear, why do you ask?"
Alfred: "Oh, nothing, only I see that they like to have it nice and quiet up there, don't they?"

wind has appeared for FHO and is said to be one of his best. It was directed by Wallace. Yes, from Frank Howard Clark's screen adaptation of the W. C. Tuttle magazine story, "Striptease Paces."

The story deals with the attempt of a young cowboy to save a valuable gold mine from the clutches of unscrupulous outlaws for a crippled old man and his beautiful granddaughter, with whom the hero has fallen in love. The capture of a wild horse, several desperate battles, a daring exhibition of horsemanship, and other exciting incidents are the highlights.

In addition to the talented young star, the cast of "Man in the Rough," includes such well known players as Marjorie King, Tom Lingham, William Norton Bailey, and Jay Morley.

German War Film Interests Local Veterans

To many local citizens "Behind the German Lines," official pictures taken by the German government during the war, will perhaps be of more than passing interest. For the first time local men and women who participated actively in the war will have the opportunity to see just what was going on behind the lines of the enemy they were facing.

During the four years of the conflict, the UFA Company of Germany had over one hundred cameramen busily engaged in filming the various battles on all fronts. Over twenty-five of them paid with their lives for venturing on the field of battle armed only with a motion picture camera.

Their sacrifice, however, has not been in vain, for war in all its reality has been pictured, not on the back lot of a Hollywood studio, but on the very field of battle itself.

The pictures show what took place from the very first day of the war in 1914, to the Armistice four years later. Every important battle, every important military figure, and even the military secrets of the High Command are revealed.

Whether one was in the front line, or at home buying Liberty Bonds, he owes it to himself to see these remarkable pictures.

"Behind the German Lines" is now showing at the Arcade theater.

New Bob Steele Thriller Coming To The Star

Patrons of the Star theater who like real dashing Western melodrama on their film menu will have their opportunity to satisfy their craving for excitement when Bob Steele, FHO Western star, comes to town in "Man in the Rough," which is scheduled to open its run on Saturday.

This is the sixth starring vehicle in which this young Western whirlling star has appeared. "Man in the Rough" is a thrilling story of a cowboy who saves a gold mine from the clutches of unscrupulous outlaws.

The picture is a real Western, with all the excitement and action that the genre is capable of. It is a story of a cowboy who saves a gold mine from the clutches of unscrupulous outlaws.

Grow and Develop

"Man never reaches the point here where he can cease to grow and develop, however great the success he may have achieved, for what over he may accomplish is only the greater opportunity and occasion for spreading its benefits to his fellow beings."—Dr. Jason N. Pierce.
