In England recently published statistics show that wives ordinarily live longer than their husbands. Crime records in Chicago show the same thing.

The normal school will bring twenty faculty members and three hundred or more students to La Grande. But it will also bring a keener civic consciousness that will be worth far more than the added population.

Tonight at Union the stock show association will express its appreciation to legislators for their work in securing a state appropriation and will pledge the constant effort of its members for a record-breaking show this spring. The Observer believes that the Eastern Oregon show is at last "over the hill," that it will become the greatest factor we have in promoting the livestock industry of the entire area east of the Cascades.

Governor Patterson, political gossip says, will probably seek to secure the state's chief office for another term. And after he retires we'd like to suggest Judge Robert W. Sawyer, newspaper publisher of Bend and state highway commissioner, for a term along about 1934. Oregon has a public servant of rare administrative ability and keen, broad-visioned judgment in Bob Sawyer. People of the state will miss a real opportunity if they fail to retain his services in the coming years.

One of the best community activities that could be undertaken this year would be a campaign to prevent carnival companies coming into La Grande. They do not provide anything unusual in the way of entertainment and they do bring an objectionable type of individual into the city in practically all cases. They take a lot of money out of town and leave very little in return. They fail to contribute anything worthwhile to the community's development or to the moral tone of community life. In recent years a carnival's chief excuse for coming has been as a benefit for some local organization seeking to raise special funds. This year The Observer hopes that other means of money raising can be devised for the sake of community interests and that carnivals and their camp followers can be made a thing of the past in La Grande.

TEACHING CITIZENSHIP

Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the Great Commoner, has some ideas about public service that could well be copied by other members of congress, male as well as female. She was elected to the house of representatives from her Florida district last November and sees in the job a greater opportunity than merely voting for and against various pieces of legislation. In a recent interview she said:

"During my term in Washington I plan to bring one boy and one girl from each county of my district for a few days' entertainment and education there. If I have a hobby I guess it's practical education in citizenship and statesmanship. I want these youngsters to see Mount Vernon and absorb the atmosphere in which George Washington lived and worked. I want them to see the supreme court, meet the president, visit both houses of congress and those great white office buildings that belong to it.

"I want them to learn the working of each government department. And to feel the historic mellowness of the White House and the spirits of all those who have made it their home.

"Through these sights and stories I want my young people to appreciate how they can serve state and nation. Much stress is laid on teaching the mature voter. I think his education should start as other education should—in early years."

Not all members of congress are financially able, of course, to do what Ruth Owen proposes for the sake of educating young people in citizenship and statesmanship, but most of them could pay more attention to their young constituents in various ways and thus promote a greater interest in government and the practical aspects of democracy. Such an activity would pay dividends in the future and would, at the same time, keep our federal representatives in closer touch with those who seek to serve.

In every young person's life there is a period when the workings and theories of government are intensely interesting subjects. To prolong that period through mature years is the privilege and pleasure of the intelligent teacher and such workers in the public service as Ruth Bryan Owen. Not that more young people shall be imbued with the ambition to hold public office—we will always have quantity for that purpose—but that a greater interest in citizenship and a more intelligent and informed conception of government shall be promoted. Indifference to government—which is democracy's greatest danger—can be prevented in the formative period of young citizens more effectively than at any other time.

ABE MARTIN

In lookin' down our long long of presidents, I believe Herbert Hoover is the best example of the possibilities of this country. He never held a poll book or even studied law. Gus Lindbergh'll find that winnin' South America and winnin' his wife's folks are two entirely different propositions.

SERVICES AT COVE CHURCH TO CONTINUE

By Mrs. J. R. Price (Observer Correspondent)
COVE, Ore. (Special)—The revival meetings at 7:30 o'clock each evening at the Baptist church will continue through the coming week as will also the morning prayer service at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. J. E. Mills received word of the death of her father, Mr. Jones, last Friday. Mr. Jones was with a son in Nebraska at the time of his death, but many Cove people will remember him as he spent a year with Mrs. Mills about five years ago.

The high school responded en masse to the invitations sent out by the campfire and boy scout groups. Games of all kinds filled the evening. Refreshments of cake, cocoa and sandwiches were served.

Dell Breashears accompanied Carl and Robert Coad to Eugene. They are going to bring home Ralph Coad for the spring vacation. He is a student at the University of Oregon.

Carl Burdick, operator of the Cove power plant, was taken ill Friday. He was taken to Baker immediately and Marvin Blake, who operated the plant until last fall, is in charge until Mr. Burdick recovers.

Mrs. Eva Lloid and daughter, Stella, walked to the Porby Saturday night with Mrs. Lloid's son, Ben, who is caretaker there. They returned home Sunday evening and report the snow still quite deep above the power house.

Mrs. Cora DeLong is suffering from a slight paralytic stroke. She is doing as well as can be expected.

BEFORE MIKE

ed. Mrs. DeLong spent the winter at Long Beach, Cal. and has only been back a week. The Daughters of the King will meet at the Episcopal rectory Wednesday evening. All members are asked to attend.

Bishop W. P. Remington will hold services at the Episcopal church Mar. 24, at 7:30 p. m. This is his annual visitation.

Grant Conley, who has been in California since the first of the year, returned to Cove Friday. Mr. Conley says the cities in California are beautiful but the rest of the state cannot compete with Oregon for beauty.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Fakler have purchased a new sport model Ford.

GUS KALLO WINS
ASTORIA, Ore., Mar. 19 (AP)—Gus Kallo, middleweight wrestler, took the first and third falls from Mervin Barackman, Centralia, Wash., here last night. Kallo took the first fall in 15 1/2 minutes with a straight arm scissors and the third fall in seven minutes with a body slam. Barackman won the second fall in 25 minutes with a head hold. Kallo claims the middleweight championship "of the world."

NOT LUCKY
CHICAGO, Mar. 19 (AP)—Several Chicago stable owners don't believe in luck anymore. A year ago, they were offered Golden Prince for $2,000 but they refused. Yesterday, they read how the horse galloped away with $98,000 in the Cofroth handicap at Tia Juana.

"And I refused him because I thought he was through," bemoaned L. M. Newgass.

An elephant's bath requires 225 worth of soap and more than $100 worth of Indian oil. Just the item you've been hunting for to decorate that income tax blank.
