MENUS

By Sister Mary
Oranges and grapefruit are at their best now and are rich in vitamins, so it behooves the conscientious housewife to use them often.

Fruit stimulates the appetite, increases the flow of digestive juices, aids in the elimination of waste and counteracts the formation of acids due to eating a large quantity of protein as well as stimulating the flow of an alkaline saliva which helps to prevent tooth decay. This last virtue makes fruit an ideal food with which to end a meal.

Practically all our oranges are from Florida and California and the question often puzzles us regarding their relative merits. The obvious answer is that both are good and choice depends on personal preference and the way in which the fruit is to be used. Surely the sweet juicy Floridians are ideal for the breakfast orange juice. And the firm-pulp California

Formulas excellent for salads or any dish in which the fruit is wanted whole.

When marketing for grapefruit, keep in mind that the fruit should be well formed, heavy in weight and have a thin skin of fine texture.

A thin, fine-textured skin almost always covers a juicy fruit. It yields to the pressure the skin is comparatively thin. Coarse, thick skin is firm and unyielding. Of course, grapefruit is thicker skinned than oranges so the comparisons should be made with fruits of the same kind.

Well colored fruit bespeaks ripeness, so choose that of deep color. Skin blemishes such as russeting, scars and scale marks do not injure the flavor of grapefruit nor impair their keeping qualities. Coarse, thick skin, soft dark spots and irregular shape are indications of inferior quality and should warn the shopper against the fruit.

Grapefruit and Orange Sherbet
Two cups grapefruit juice, 1 cup orange juice, 1 1/2 cups sugar, 2 cups water, 2 eggs (whites), 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin.

Boil sugar and water for 10 minutes. Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes and add to boiling syrup. Let stand until cool and add fruit juices. When beginning to thicken, fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into a freezer and pack in four parts ice to one part fruit cream salt. Let stand two or three hours until frozen.
