Dairy Bulletin Is Issued After Study Of Oregon

This county is on the eve of a movement looking toward the expansion of the dairy industry in Eastern Oregon, particularly in this county and Wallawa county. A study sent out recently from the state college concerns a new bulletin issued this spring along lines of little interest to dairymen, whether operating on a large or a small scale.

A dairy farm in Oregon deriving 50 per cent of its income from the herd, needs to have from 18 to 20 cows producing 250 to 350 pounds of butter-fat each to return a living of $1500 a year to the owner in addition to that supplied by the farm itself.

These and other facts gleaned from a study of Oregon dairy farms are contained in a new extension bulletin entitled "Dairy Farm Income Required to Maintain Standard Farm Homes in Oregon," written by Ralph S. Reese, farm management specialist, and N. C. Jamison, dairy specialist.

This bulletin is the first of a series on Oregon farm incomes, according to announcement of Paul Marks, director of the extension service. As data becomes available and opportunity is afforded, other numbers will follow, each dealing separately with a distinctive type of farming such as poultry production, fruit raising, range livestock production and others.

The objects of this series, according to Director Marks, are to encourage a business point-of-view in farming, to illustrate a method which any one may apply with modifications to his own situation, and finally to establish standards for future development in Oregon agriculture.

Many farmers, the bulletin points out, are striving to succeed under circumstances which do not permit success. Seventeen thousand farmers in Oregon in 1927, or one-fourth the total, had a net equity of only $6,200 in their business including both home and land. Even allowing liberal returns on both capital and labor, the incomes from those farms must necessarily be small.

The first bulletin takes up the matters of adequate feed, efficient use of by-products, capital and labor requirements, indebtedness, and income. A gross income of at least $1500 is needed to provide $1500 for living expenses for the family, it was found.

be exhibited at the coming livestock show. It was recently reported that one dairy herd in the valley had been disposed of on account of the prevalence of the disease.

GRANGE COMMITTEE TAKING STEPS FOR STATE CONVENTION

The Booster committee appointed at the recent meeting of the Pomona grange to conduct the preliminary work looking toward securing the 1930 meeting of the state grange for La Grande, held its initial meeting Saturday afternoon at the chamber of commerce. There were 12 members present, representing a number of the grange and with them in the meeting was Albert Hunter, secretary of the chamber, who has promised to lend every assistance possible, as has the entire organization with which he is connected.

Numerous plans and their feasibility were discussed and Chairman Ralph Hunt of Island City, member of the Blue Mt. grange, appointed a number of working committees. They were as follows: Finance—W. O. Sherwood, chairman, John Marchison, James Gekeler.

To secure cooperation of all Eastern Oregon, J. E. Witherspoon, chairman, C. Y. Beale, J. A. Nice. To work with three neighboring counties, Baker, Umatilla and Wallawa—L. F. Wright, Mrs. Helene Lincoln, H. H. Weatherspoon.

Among those present at the meeting were Ralph Hunt, Mrs. C. G. Springer, Mrs. Helene Lincoln, Mrs. Walter Pierce, A. W. Nelson, Hernal Hug, J. E. Witherspoon, C. Y. Beale, L. F. Wright and W. O. Sherwood.

It is quite generally known throughout the valley that the different subordinate granges have recently launched this campaign to bring the state convention next year in Eastern Oregon and to La Grande. Eastern Oregon is the logical place for the 1930 meeting and La Grande's only competition so far, it is said, comes from the direction of Milton-Freewater, in Umatilla county. The work has just been started here and the granges are hoping for the support and cooperation of every citizen and group of citizens in the county.

The state grange convention is a gathering of no mean size. It attracts several hundred people from this state and also delegations from adjoining states, Idaho, Washington and California. The convention proper lasts for several days and with preliminary official meetings and following committee and board meetings, there will be a large company of visitors in the convention city for a week or more.

The program of the convention always includes use of state wide reputation and also of nation wide reputation. Speakers of prominence are secured and from this angle alone, its boosters say, the securing of the convention would be tremendously worth while.

Wool Shearing Now Under Way In West Oregon

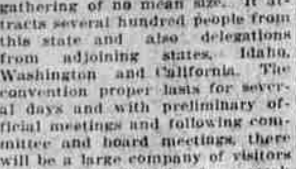

Wool-shearing has started in the Willamette valley, according to the Oregon Wool Grower and the market has opened at 35 cents for medium, 32 cents for fine and 30 cents for fine. This is somewhat less than the growers expected and some are waiting for more competition before offering freely.

Shearing was supposed to start this week in Eastern Oregon. It is reported that practically no contracting of wool has been going on. Cold weather has delayed shearing in the Yakima valley in Washington, as well as in other wool sections of the range districts.

Consignment houses are active in seeking consignments believing that the present low tendency in the market is only temporary and that the fall market will be sufficiently high to make consignments profitable to growers. Many inducements in the way of financial assistance, grading, storage and insurance are being offered.

Predictions are being made by those in close touch with the market trend that buying activity will be dependent upon quality and demand this season more than for several years past.
