MENUS

By Sister Mary.
When marked for the benefits it contains in its leaves, spinach has without any doubt "high score." The high iron and vitamin content is valuable in the diet of both sick and well.

Now that so many vegetables are sold by the pound rather than quart and peck it may help some inexperienced housewives as well as those who have marketed for years "dry measure" to know that one pound of good spinach will serve a family of three.

When you go to market and shop for spinach look for plants with plenty of good healthy leaves. This vegetable is an edible foliage so the condition of the leaves is important. Medium sized plants of good, dark green color, leaves fresh and crisp, free from sand or dirt, are desirable and mean that the vegetable will be tender and a good bright green when cooked and dressed for the table.

Spinach which is very sandy or dirty is extremely difficult to clean, for the grit seems to defy all washing and is sure to remain in the cooked dish.

If the leaves are light colored and of a yellowish tinge and tightly curled, plant insects are usually present and the spinach itself will not have a pleasant flavor when cooked. If this condition prevails, that particular lot of spinach should not be purchased. A few plants with a yellowed leaf do not mean an inferior quality and of course the center of the plants often contain tender yellow baby leaves which are most desirable.

If the housewife will buy her spinach with care, cook and serve it with care and then devise an intriguing name for the dish she will hear no grumbling from the assembled family at mealtime.

Everybody, young, old and indifferent, she who would diet to gain in weight, she who would lose in weight, the boy or girl at the "training" table may eat spinach and be benefited.

Spinach salad.
Two cups cooked and chopped spinach, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 teaspoon paprika, 4 tablespoons olive oil, 2 tablespoons lemon juice, 3 hard-boiled eggs, paprika, salt, paprika and yolks of eggs. Add oil and lemon juice and mix thoroughly with a fork. Shape in small molds and serve on a bed of lettuce with the whites of eggs cut in shreds and sprinkled over the top.
