THE DARLING
Of all the people I adore,
I say it without bluff,
It's a sympathetic darling
Who often reads my stuff.

First Customer: "So you've been abroad? How did you like Venice?"
Second Customer: "I only stayed a few days. The whole place was flooded."

Daughter—Mother, the new aviator thinks I'm the nicest girl in town. Shall I ask him to call?
Mother—No, let him keep on thinking so.

Teacher: "Now, boys, can any of you tell me something about Good Friday?"
Tommy: "Yes, ma'am. He was the fellow that drove the housework for Robinson Crusoe."

"Now, remember," cautioned the doctor, "you must absolutely eat out rich food, heavy meats, tea, coffee, etc. You must go on a diet—only salads, fruits, vegetables, thin soups, etc."

Extra Fat Lady, anxiously: "But, oh, doctor, I don't understand—should I eat those before or after meals?"
Russell Crouse, who conducts a good column also (this is in the New York Evening Post) is guilty of this:

"A Filipino manufacturer is making dress material from banana stalks and the clothing which will eventually result should, of course, be easy to slip on."

LOST
LOST—Small white poodle with brown ears and brown spot on back. Wore collar. Reward, 1317 Washington. 4-18-29P

AT THE THEATERS

"Branded Man" Now Playing At Colonial

To everyone who had a part in the production of Kayart's newest drama, "The Branded Man," picture fans extend their appreciation for excellent cinema fare. It is said to be flawless in plot, acting, direction and photography. The picture has everything for every type of theater goer—drama, pathos, comedy and romance amid luxurious settings. Tod Robbins, from whose story the picture was made, supplied splendid material, and both Trem Carr, the producer, and Scott Pembroke, the director, have made the most of every salient point. Charles Delaney and Juno Marlowe give fine performances in the featured roles, with Gordon Griffith, Andy Clyde, Erin LaBissoniere and Lucy Beaumont lending capable support. "The Branded Man" is now playing at the Colonial Theater, where it opens today for an engagement of two days.

Colorful Mexican Fiesta Is Climax Setting

A feature of Mexican life which it is sometimes difficult for Americans to appreciate properly is the fiesta, which plays so large a part in the lives of the people below the Rio Grande and which, in the case of the photoplay, "The Valley of Hunted Men," starring Buffalo Bill Jr., which is at the Star Theater Saturday, provides the setting for the rising climax of the picture. Every Latin-American community indulges in these pleasant celebrations which consist of singing, dancing and drinking in some public square, or, as in this case, in the large patio of a private residence. The guests wear their gayest clothes, everyone is happy and gay, and it makes an admirable setting for the serious peril in which the hero suddenly finds himself as a result of his daring. Like a thundercloud, suddenly turning black a sky of perfect cloudless summer blue, the desperado whom Tom Mallory has been deliberately baiting turn on him and nearly succeed in ending his adventure with tragedy. Only his almost superhuman strength and agility permit him to escape and bring the capture of the desperado to a triumphant conclusion. Miss Myrna Loy, whose cinematic adventures usually take the form of rolling villas, and who is now doing just that, at the Arcade Theater, in Warner Bros. sensational melodrama of the Chicago "Loop," "State Street Sadie"—has taken up fencing as an aid to her work on the screen—and off, for that matter. Myrna Loy is a devotee of many sports, swimming, golf, tennis, dancing, hiking, horseback riding and driving, being some of the more active diversions in which she takes part. "One must be a good sport, for social reasons, of course," says the green-eyed, red-haired fan favorite. "Then it helps one to keep what-ever liveness and grace one possesses and to attain more. It is of use, too, in keeping off the look of weariness which has such an insidious way of wrinkling up the corners of eyes and mouth. Muscles are kept in trim by it, blood is made to gallop along as good honest blood should go. Exercise gained through sports gives one the feeling of courage, helps one to command situations, both on and off the screen. "The spirit of play which sport invokes does much to keep the schoolgirl expression as well as the eyes bright, the flesh firm, the step elastic. It is the natural relaxation from the inactivities of life. "Of course one should see to it that athletic activities are properly balanced. It is for this reason that I have taken up fencing, in combination with swimming and horseback riding, which are more strictly physical. Fencing makes
