Authorities predict for the Future what DODGE BROTHERS OFFER TODAY

"The all-metal seamless body is the auto body of the future," George J. Mercer, consulting body engineer and chairman of the body division of the Society of Automotive Engineers, predicted at a meeting of the Cleveland Section of the S. A. E.—Automotive Daily News, February 12, 1929.

NEW DODGE BROTHERS SIX
CHRYSLER MOTORS PRODUCT
L. C. SMITH
9 Depot St.

To illustrate his thorough knowledge of the city, a local man-about-town claimed recently to know three places where a person could obtain genuine near-beer.

After the doctor tells you walking is the only thing, and to get out on your feet and give your lungs a chance, he rides away in his new purple brougham.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler says there isn't a single genius left in the world, and some of the rest of us have days when we are pretty dissatisfied with ourselves, too.

President Hoover has reduced his circumference some fifteen pounds since taking office. Not because the work has been too strenuous but because he was that much overweight and has taken regular exercise each morning to get down to the proper size. His is an example that might well be copied by those who carried surplus fat around—and an example that may well be avoided by those not in that class. It is just as dangerous to be under weight, doctors say, as it is to be over. Hoover came down. The slim, emaciated person who keeps below normal trying to be stylish might well come up. Normal weight is both healthier and more attractive.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT

So important is the personal equation of high executives that financial-rating books may in the future adopt special notations to indicate the capacity of the men at the top. In many cases these men are so well known for their achievements that any newspaper reader might be trusted to give them a fair rating. Ford, Schwab, Owen D. Young, the late Judge Gary are outstanding examples of executives in this class; but there are thousands of lesser leaders, men in high place, whose measure of genius is an unknown quantity to those who put money into the shares of their corporations. Annual reports may serve as rough-and-ready indications of their ability; but at best they tell only part of the story, and they do not always tell it in a version that may be taken at face value.

Balance sheets show tangible assets and liabilities to a penny. They even offer rough estimates as to such intangibles as the value of patents and goodwill, but they are silent as to the all-important factor of management. How, indeed, could they be otherwise? Who, for example, could appraise in dollars and cents the cash value of Henry Ford's business judgment, his ability for shaping sound policies, his technical knowledge and his practical experience? Or, having arrived at a correct valuation of these intangibles, who could guarantee, remembering the uncertainty of life, that these services would remain at the command of the corporation for the ensuing year, or even for the month to come? Such reflections are a fresh reminder of the uncertainties of investment and industrial effort. Management of proved ability passes at an instant's notice into untried hands. Under certain direction a business may be imminently successful—under the direction of others, it may fall rapidly to failure. The human element is great.
