

Local News In Brief

First Murder—The first man to strike bundles in Oregon was J. H. Pease, now a jeweler of La Grande, who was on the Imperial yesterday on his way to Corvallis to be a timekeeper at the track meet. Striking bundles is an art which Mr. Pease had learned as a boy, and because he had the knack he was all the while a hired hand until he decided he was too old to keep it up. But while that was in the wild '90s, the footracing fever was still strong in later years, for Mr. Pease kept running just for the pleasure it gave him, and the exercise. That is why he is today straight as an arrow and nimble of foot and as debonair as the red carnation he invariably wears in his coat label.—Portland Oregonian.
