ADDRESS BY BOUVY OPENS CONVENTION

that the laity may realize the significance of a scientific medical education and of the service the well-trained medical man is prepared to render.

The address by Dr. Bouvy, followed the opening ceremonies in the Sacajawea Inn. A. T. Hill, president of the city commission of La Grande, welcomed the visiting physicians to the city, and Dr. John B. Gregory, of Wallawa, president of the Eastern Oregon district Medical society, welcomed the delegates on behalf of the organization he heads. Invocation was given by the Rev. Vernon E. Hall, First Methodist Episcopal minister of La Grande.

A feature of this afternoon's sessions will be an address by Dr. P. H. Falls, professor of obstetrics, University of Illinois college of medicine. Tonight a public program, with addresses by John Boydard, of the University of Oregon, and Dr. Frederick A. Kiehlis, of the Portland medical branch of the University of Oregon, will be presented under the title "Keeping Fit."

Dr. Mayo Here Friday Tomorrow Dr. William J. Mayo, of Rochester, Minn., will be the guest of the convention, and at two o'clock in the afternoon is scheduled to speak to the physicians on the subject of "The Cancer Problem." At noon Dr. Mayo will be guest of honor at a chamber of commerce luncheon and he will be called upon for a brief talk.

The convention will close Saturday afternoon, following the third annual Oregon medical convention at the La Grande country club, which will be played during the morning.

To Enjoy Recreation Many of the visiting delegates expect to enjoy fishing, hiking and automobile trips throughout Saturday and Sunday in Union and Wallawa counties before returning to their homes.

Other events on the morning program included a meeting of the House of Delegates in the banquet room, and a scientific discussion at 11:30 a. m., following the president's address. Dr. W. H. Queermann, of Portland; Dr. Charles E. Palmer, of Ontario; and Dr. S. G. Henke, of Portland, were listed on the program, with Dr. Dorwin J. Palmer, of Portland, to open the second discussion. Lantern demonstrations were a part of the program.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the annual meeting of the Alumni association, Medical School, University of Oregon, was to be held at a luncheon in the banquet room, and at 2 o'clock a second scientific discussion was to start. Besides Dr. Fall's address, the following medical men were on the program: Dr. William F. Hollenbeck, of Portland; Dr. A. W. Wells, of Salem; Dr. C. E. Eames, of Portland; Dr. Goodrich C. Schouffler, of Portland; Dr. J. Christopher O'Day, of Honolulu; and Dr. Raymond E. Watkins, of Portland.

A bridge luncheon and trip around the valley were to be held early this afternoon for the members of the women's auxiliary, and at 4 p. m. the visiting women were to meet with the La Grande Neighborhood club for an educational program. The annual meeting is to be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Faces Charge in Millionaire's Death

It was no gentle push, but a powerful, smashing blow that felled Arthur Morgan Smith, Cleveland millionaire, so that he died later of a fractured skull. So said a witness for the state when Samuel B. Bell, wealthy Baltimore oil man, was released in $10,000 bail to await action of a grand jury on a charge of manslaughter. Here you see Bell, derby in hand, leaving Homicide Court in New York.

and the water turned a dirty yellowish brown as it settled and sloshed on the floors.

Many of the gassed, who physicians said experienced similar conditions to gas attacks in the world war, were carried out alive, only to die when the pure air of outdoors or oxygen artificially administered at hospitals failed to rid their lungs of the poison fumes.

"Believe it or not," said Frank Kilrain, one of the scores of taxicab drivers who worked incessantly carrying victims throughout the afternoon, "as soon as they hit the air they turned green."

HUMPHREYS STILL MISSING PORTLAND, May 16 (AP)—Four increased today that Lester W. Humphreys, prominent member of the Oregon bar, would not be found alive. Humphreys, former United States attorney, disappeared at 1:30 p. m. Tuesday while fishing in a treacherous part of the Deschutes river.

An Austrian society has been formed to condemn use of gas and aircraft in warfare.

RACING WESTWARD FREDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, May 16 (AP)—The dirigible Graf Zeppelin, mighty mistress of the air, raced westward with the sun today above southwestern Europe on its second trip across the Atlantic to America. It made a previous trip last October.

Before it lay a variable course above Gibraltar, probably the Azores and Bermuda, to Lakehurst, N. J., which the dirigible's master, Dr. Hugo Eckener, did not expect to reach before late Saturday night or Sunday morning.

Gorilla in Crew Aboard the ship were 40 of the crew, 18 passengers, and a female gorilla, "Sue." The only woman passenger was Mrs. Mary Pierce, wife of a New York utilities broker, who made the trip despite urgent pleadings of her husband and mother. Among the men was Captain Sir George Hubert Wilkins, Arctic explorer.

The ship was trundled from its hangar at 5:45 a. m. and at the pilot's command was released for its long voyage at 5:57 a. m. (11:57 p. m. eastern standard time Wednesday.) It rose slowly in an intermittent drizzle, while 200 or more spectators cheered. It circled the field once, and disappeared in ten minutes in the direction of the Lake Constance and Basel, Switzerland.

Dr. Eckener before he left announced his course: "After leaving France we will go along the coast of Spain until we reach Gibraltar and then we will see what next."

7500 Mile Trip The decision to pass over Gibraltar indicated that an almost extreme southerly great circle course probably would be followed, the distance to be covered thus approximately 7500 miles as against a 4900 mile minimum distance if the northern great circle course were followed.

Passengers and members of the ship's crew began to arrive at the dirigible's hangar shortly after 5 o'clock. The gorilla was taken aboard first.

Mrs. Pierce was one of the first at the field. She was attired in beige traveling costume, straw hat trimmed with feathers, tan shoes and silk stockings. The silk stockings, however, she changed for woolen golf hose upon the advice of a newspaper correspondent. Her French maid brought her a small bag which contained a costly brown fur coat.

"I do hope I'll see you again," the maid said with a catch in her voice.

Mrs. Pierce replied: "Oh! certainly, and don't forget to send the messages I told you to send."

Never Changed Her Mind Her decision to make the trip was believed here never to have been changed after her purchase of passage Tuesday, although to relieve anxiety of relatives in America she had reported she had cancelled her booking and she herself sent messages to America saying she was not going. To other relatives in New York, however, she explained to expect her for Sunday dining.

Dr. Eckener was the last aboard the Zeppelin. It was taken from its hangar, poking its nose impudently into the dreary grey mist. At 5:55 he gave the command to start the motors and the next minute the vast dirigible was on its way, first describing a loop over Friedrichshafen.

All the windows on the starboard side were lined with faces, whose owners waved their hands in answer to the "hoops" of the crowd below. All seemed in a cheerful jovial mood. If the frenzy of former flights was missing, it was because the Graf's flights have lost their novelty; certainly no one felt any apprehension as to the outcome of the voyage.

As the dirigible was taken from its hangar another blowaway—the seventh since yesterday—was caught as he, dressed in mechanic's clothes, attempted to sneak into the hall through a closing door.

The ship carried 4480 pounds of freight in addition to its passengers, this including considerable air mail, a grand piano, a painting and other things. In addition a huge supply of food and fresh water had been placed aboard, to provide rations for a much longer period than that expected to be used in the flight.

Instead of blast gas for which the ship's motors are best fitted, a supply of Leuzol, was taken along for fuel.

Names Given Planets The planets were named for the ancient deities. Jupiter was the supreme deity; Mars, the god of war; Venus, goddess of beauty and love; Neptune, god of the sea; Saturn, god of agriculture, gardening, etc.; Uranus, regarded as the personification of heaven; Mercury, god of trade (messenger of gods).

Small Things Count The lives of trust hermits are those in which there are no great deeds to look back upon. It is the little things well done that go to make up a successful and truly good life.—Roosevelt.
