SEEK DENTIST TO IDENTIFY SKULL

Los Angeles County Authorities Investigating Growsome Find.

LOS ANGELES, May 20 (AP)—Search for the dentist who authenticates believe might establish the identity of the victim whose skull was found in the Los Angeles river led here Saturday, today occupied the attention of county investigators.
In the opinion of the county autopsy physician, the head belongs to the torso which was found minus arms and legs floating in the same river six weeks ago.
Since that time no clue has been established as to the identity of the woman victim, no motive for the crime has been fixed, and only one person has been connected with the slaying in the role of a suspect. He was later released.
Experts of the county homicide squad were of the opinion today that it would be only a matter of a few days until they could name the victim by the teeth.
A search was being carried on today for the arms and legs near the spot where the head, with the skull fractured as if by a blow from a hammer, had been picked up by small boys. Not realizing what their awesome find meant, one of the boys impaled it upon a stick and carried it to the roadway, where a horrified woman motorist loaded the boys into her car and hurried them to nearest telephone where she notified police.
That the woman first was murdered by blows on the head before her legs and arms were severed, was evidenced by a lateral posterior skull fracture, authorities believed.

A letter from Tacoma, Wash., to police here informing them of the disappearance of Marjorie Cook, former resident there, has resulted in a quest of information which might identify her as the torso victim. She was last seen shortly before the body was found.
Louis Klein, prisoner in the county jail was also to be questioned today regarding his knowledge of the case.

I. C. C. UPSET BY DECISION FROM COURT

The bitter controversy, waged for years over the valuations placed by the interstate commerce commission on railroad property for rate-making purposes was ended in the highest court in a substantial defeat for the commerce commission.
In ending the controversy the court overturned the valuations used by the commission for rate-making and other purposes which are approximately eleven billion dollars less than claimed by the railroads. Under it the commission must scrap its valuation of years, conducted at great expense to the government and prepare new valuations giving consideration to reproduction values.
The opinion will, according to the government, result in a rapid upward revision of rates, although counsel for the railroads during argument of the case emphatically denied that it necessarily would result in higher tariffs. These asserted that the railroads would be controlled by what the traffic could bear.
Cost of reproduction at prevailing prices was accepted by the court as an element in railroad valuations. It was stated that such cost was an important item to be given consideration in determining valuations.
Justice Holmes, Brandies and Stone dissented from the majority opinion.
