GOLD BULLETS

by Charles G. Booth

SYNOPSIS: Discovery of a famous gold-mounted pistol in Andrew Ogden's home after his murder develops the theory that the wealthy civic leader, had been, 30 years before, adventurer and overlord of Torridity, Alex Peterson. Stunned by the revelation, John Peebles, Ogden's intimate friend, still insists that the blackmailer Dillon, and not Ogden's son, Jerry, is the murderer. Peebles' niece, Lucy, engaged Luther MacNair, famous detective, to prove her fiancé innocent, but MacNair also supports the police theory of Jerry's guilt.

Chapter 16 ON JERRY'S MAIL

There was nothing else to be done, and so we followed Deacon from the Ogden home. I put the car in the garage and MacNair came into the house with me. Mrs. Moffit had got a fire crackling in the den and he put his back to the blaze while I sat down at the desk and began to pore in the little red notebook. MacNair watched me, his ironic look tempered by amusement.

"Crews?" he inquired when I had done.

"In a way," I admitted. "I thought I might be able to supplement your conclusions with one or two of my own."

"Good idea! Two heads are better than one. Well, I must be off."

"No, indeed!" I exclaimed, standing up. "You must have dinner with us."

He laughed. "You tempt me, I have an indifferent book."

"You'll stay?"

"Thank you, I will."

The meat wasn't especially lively, although both Mrs. Moffit and Lucy did their best, and I must admit MacNair was interesting in his food-bloated way. But his twisted outlook and his ironical philosophy of life took from our intercourse that spontaneity which always graces my table. I suppose the trapping of one's fellow beings discourages the social instinct. He and I had a pleasant hour in my den, though, and I found him able to tell me a good many things about small firearms.

When he had gone, Lucy came in.

Dropping on a stool at my feet, she leaned her dark head against my knees. My fingers were soon stroking her sleek black hair. A common sadness of spirit suffused us and neither of us spoke for a little while.

"There's no word?" Lucy whispered presently.

"None," I said, huskily, and she pressed her head hard against my knee.

When she looked up, I tried to avoid her eyes, but there must have been some magnetic quality in the look she turned on me for I fell my eyes down to her. Her attention tore my heart and I had to blow my nose violently before I felt equal to recounting what had transpired during the day.

"You still believe in him, Uncle John?"

"I believe in him! Of course I believe in him!"

"And you don't think anything dreadful could have happened to him?"

I sensed the terror leaping in her breast, but I kept my voice steady.

"Certainly not! He'll turn up in a day or two."

She nestled softly against me then. In her tender moments Lucy is inexpressibly dear to me.

I must admit I am getting on for the sort of thing that began at breakfast the next morning. Nothing like it had come my way in 10 years or more and it surprises me that I carried on to the end as well as I did. Probably my pride in the audacious thing Lucy was to do, re-kindled the fire of my vanished youth, for I have the timid man's admiration of daring. How intensely vivid a woman's

THEATERS

"Blockade" At Star on Friday

All the mighty drama and sweeping thrills of war on the high seas will be offered on the Star theater screen Friday when "Blockade," FBO's great melodrama of run row, opens for a two day showing.

Anna Q. Nilsson, given a role for which she declares she had been waiting through the whole of her career, strikes dramatic heights as the queen of the rum pirates. Around her is woven a gripping tale of adventure, intrigue and love.

In the supporting cast are Wallace McDonald, Walter McGrail and James Bradbury Jr., all contributing fine performances.

Delegates Go To Medford Session

By Miss Lois Witherspoon (Observer Correspondent)

CRICKET FLAT (Special) — Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Miller left Thursday for Medford where they were going to attend grand lodge. From there they will make a trip to the coast and return home in about two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Witherspoon and sons were La Grande visitors Monday.

The Misses Esther Witt, Marjorie Greene, Mosess, Lowell Fuller, Homer Greene and Francis Wade were Cove visitors Sunday afternoon.

Dena and Luella Witt, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Blumenstein, Fred Davis, Jack Parsons, Kenneth Blanchard and Ronald Scoules were among those who enjoyed swimming at Cove Sunday afternoon.

A farewell surprise party was given Friday evening at the home of Edwin Beem in honor of Misses Cora Price, Averil Stewart and Wilena Stewart. The evening was spent in playing games on the lawn. After an enjoyable evening refreshments were served. Those present were Misses Averil Stewart, Cora Price, Willett Stewart, Gertrude Dawes, Dorothy Hollan, Marjorie Greene, Dorothy Gettings.

"Tell him to call headquarter. He said he might stop at your place first. Don't forget!"

I stared into the mouthpiece numb with horror. Jerry... Skull Valley... Torridity. Torridity and Andrew's death had come to form a sort of unholy unity. Jerry had gone there. But why? And why hadn't he returned?

"Good God!" I muttered. "Unless he can explain himself Deacon will insist he's back under 'guard'!"

A horrible fear that Jerry mightn't be able to explain his flight to Deacon's satisfaction, although he would to mine, overwhelmed me.

"Jerry fleeing to Torridity—the police on his trail—accused of murder. Another amazing development in tomorrow's chapter.

Representative Rainey of Illinois said the new house tariff bill would cost the farmers of the country $400,000,000. And that you'll have to admit, is relieving the farmers with a vengeance.
