Gypsy Idea Used At Bridge Party Saturday Evening

The Gypsy idea, very cleverly carried out, made the evening at bridge Saturday evening with Miss Veitch, 567 O avenue one of real enjoyment to her dozen guests. Three tables were at play, the number having been fashioned from tamarack twigs in keeping with the general arrangement of the evening, as were also the fairy cards, which were old ragged bits of paper. Fortune telling constituted another pleasant feature, cards, tea leaves and palms having been studied and interpreted by Miss Mima Cooper, Mrs. Evelyn Bennett and Mrs. Young. Miss Mabel E. Jolly made the high score of the evening and Mrs. Bonnett low. Some nice refreshments were served.

Too often we overlook the possibilities in the inexpensive carrot. Raw or cooked they are a valuable food from the health standpoint. They combine excellently with more expensive vegetables and can be used in several delicious and novel ways.

We often hear that carrots are "good for the complexion," but seldom stop to reason why. To gain the most benefit from the vegetable as a beautifier, it should be eaten raw. Carrot sticks add a charming bit of color to a tray of relishes and just at this time of year are at their best. Grated carrot is good in any vegetable salad. Next to onions carrots are the most efficient blood-purifiers and rank next to spinach in iron content. Two reasons for clear complexions and sparkling eyes.

By eating carrot raw there is no loss of vitamin C. This is the vitamin that always is affected by heat and that is in fresh young vegetables in larger amounts than in those which have been stored for some time.

Vitamins A and B also are present in carrots, making it one of the most important vegetables available. Its cheapness puts within the reach of every family those food substances which are essential to growth, health and vigor. Strong muscles, red blood, sound teeth, firm flesh, straight bones, glossy hair and clear skin are the result when the food substances known as the "vitamins" are present in the diet.

Since there usually is less loss of mineral salts and other nutrients when vegetables are baked it's worth while serving baked

GOLD BULLETS

SYNOPSIS. Lucy looks Henry Deacon, chief of police, into a closet, takes his auto and starts for the desert to find Jerry Ogden, her fiancé, accused of murdering his father. Lucy is waging a game fight against serious odds to prove Jerry innocent and is anxious to warn him of the charge before he is arrested. Her uncle, John Peebles, follows her to Terrilly, ghost town in Skull Valley. Harassed by the blistering heat, Peebles searches the town for the pair but fails to find a trace of them.

Chapter 13
IN THE DESERT TOMB
It was close on four o'clock, Lucy I reasoned, had got here about noon. She had found Jerry and they had left together at once along the main road, and by the time we were probably approaching Shinbone Canyon on the west. Another couple of hours should see them back in San Felipe.

Instead of following them I would remain overnight in Terrilly and improve my opportunity by nosing around Andrew's old haunts. Evidence of some sort was in my mind, but of what nature and how I was to find it, I hadn't the slightest idea. If I had known I wouldn't have planned so casually. The sun was waning, but the street was still as hot as a boiler pit and I looked about for a temporary garage. The wide-open doors of a livery stable hinted of cooler regions beyond and I drove through them into the building. Stopping the engine, I tackled a pile of sandwiches and a bag of fruit. Refreshed, I went out again. I had caught some 50 yards or so when I began to wonder if I were as completely alone as I had supposed. The odd feeling grew upon me and I wished I had brought a revolver.

Stopping in front of a sort of dance hall, saloon, and hotel, I concluded that it was a good place to begin my investigations. Most of the name on the building was obliterated. It consisted of three words and the last word seemed to be "Place." I also made out a "J." and "L." and a "H." The rest of it suddenly flashed upon me. "Joe Lundy's Place"—that was it. "Joe Lundy's Place," I shouted. "Joe Lundy—that woman in black—the woman Andrew gave the check to!"

It couldn't be coincidence, of course. The woman in black was or had been the wife of a man who had kept this resort 20 years ago! And Andrew Ogden had given her a check for $1,000! But why? And why had the swashbuckling Alex Peterson become the stall and respectable Andrew Ogden? And why had Dillon blackmailed him? Back of mystery and bewilderment, I entered the resort, prepared for anything now. It must have been a pretentious place in its day. A dance floor occupied the middle of the building. At the upper end was a small stage. Along one side ran a bar. A stair led to vegetables whenever possible. Scalloped carrots are an excellent example of a baked vegetable dish.

Scalloped Carrots
Two cups thinly sliced carrots, 3-4 cup thinly sliced onion, 2 green peppers, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1-3 cup coarse stale bread crumbs, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon sugar, 1-8 teaspoon pepper.

Arrange carrots and onions in alternating layers in a well buttered baking dish. Sprinkle peppers which have been scalded, seeds removed and minced through carrots and onions. Melt butter, stir in flour and when perfectly blended slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Bring to the boiling point and pour over mixture in baking dish. Cover and bake 35 minutes in a moderate oven. Remove cover, sprinkle with crumbs, dot with bits of butter and return to oven to brown the top. Serve from baking dish.

down the street. Still they did not hear me, and the roadster passed entirely beyond the range of my voice. Plunging into the livery stable, I climbed unsteadily into the car, determined to catch them if I burned out the engine. The sun had gone to my head and my heart, not as good as it used to be, was thundering unmercifully against my ribs. A swallow of water revived me and I started the engine. The car slip forward with a springless thud, thud, that sent me tumbling out again.

The tires were flat. They had been cut by some one. I sank limply onto the running-board. You can hardly blame me for harboring the thought that Jerry and Lucy had seen me after all. But I didn't harbor it long.

I knew my Lucy better than that. And Jerry was a fine manly young fellow with the instincts of a gentleman and a deep affection for me. No, they had neither seen or heard me just now, or, incredibly as it seemed, when I first had come into the town. But where had they been that the blaring of my car horn had not reached them? The two brothers mine? Likely enough. And where were they off to now? San Felipe? On Lucy's account Jerry had insisted on the longer route across the valley instead of the shorter but more dangerous one by way of Pitchfork Canyon. They would be in San Felipe before midnight. Yes, I knew my Lucy!

But not so well as I thought. It was to turn out.

In someone else in Terrilly? Who cut the tires on Peebles' car? Tomorrow's chapter reveals new intrigue, mystery.

Evangeline Booth Spends Poor Night

HARTSDALE, N. Y., May 27—(AP)—Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in America, who was injured when she was thrown against the top of her automobile Friday, had a poor night and showed no improvement today, her physician announced. "She is still painfully ill," Dr. Walter Clark Tilden said, "suffering from contusions all over the body, especially over the left eye. The eye, which was almost completely closed, is now slightly better. On further examination I find no organic disturbances. I hope to have X-rays made on Wednesday."

I stumbled outside. The roadster was 100 yards down the street, bound for the open desert and, I supposed, the Devil's Mouth. "Lucy!" I reared. "Lucy! Jerry! Stop there! Where are you going? Lucy! Jerry!" They did not hear me. Shouting their names, I tore

Famous Duelling Ground
The Duke, one of the most famous duelling grounds in the world, was in the suburbs of New Orleans. On one particular Sunday in 1828, ten duels were fought there. Between 1834 and 1844, scarcely a day passed without a duel. The odds on this ground are still standing. Duels in those days were fought over such unimportant differences that they would now be regarded as trivial.

All animals naturally have the impulse to land on their feet when falling. Since cats are more agile than other animals, if they are not too close to the floor when falling, they are more successful in landing on their feet.

Some People Never Get Ahead Without Getting Behind-

Being in debt is sometimes necessary to success. Many men have made money because of the fact that they built up good business credit and used it to enlarge their earning opportunities.

Loans are an every-day business necessity. Few men have enough ready capital to do the things that they want to do to promote their business affairs.

The important thing is possessing enough credit to command the required loans. Good security is desired—but, more than that, is evidence that a man can save consistently, that he can and will spend less than he makes.

A savings account will serve as a valuable business surplus fund. It will also help build good credit—will pave the way for a loan when the need arises. Discuss this angle with your banker. He's always anxious to be of service.
