Miss Mildred Fox, Mr. Pflughaupt Married Saturday

A beautiful simplicity marked the wedding Saturday morning, of Miss Mildred Fox and Mr. Arthur Pflughaupt at the home of the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fox, 1202 Second street. A group of fourteen friends and relatives were invited guests, to witness the pretty ceremony.

Just preceding the ceremony, Mrs. Marie Flynn, accompanied on the piano by Miss Elizabeth Hess sang "At Dawn" by Callman and "Into The Dawn With You" also by Callman and then as Miss Hess played the Wedding March from Lohengrin, the bride and groom, attended by Mr. John C. Gilbert and Mrs. Bynum, took their places before the officiating clergyman, Rev. E. O. Hess, who read the simple ring service. The bride wore a beautiful gown of a delicate steel pink brocade with a chiffon overskirt, which was imported from China, and carried an exquisite bride's bouquet. A wedding breakfast immediately followed the ceremony, Mrs. A. V. Baker assisting with the serving. The guests were all seated at one table, centered with a lovely basket of sweet peas and ferns.

Mr. and Mrs. Pflughaupt immediately left on a motor trip starting east from La Grande and will return duty first to take up their residence in the Cleaver apartments.

Both the principals in Saturday's wedding are well known in this city. Mrs. Pflughaupt has been in the teaching profession since completing her high school here and college work and has just finished the year's teaching at Baker. Mr. Pflughaupt is the new navy recruiting officer.

Mr. and Mrs. Rose Honored at Lodge

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rose, who are leaving La Grande to make their permanent home in Seattle, were especially honored Friday evening at the regular meeting of the Pythian Sisters. In addition to other courtesies shown, Mrs. Rose, who has gone through the chairs in this order, was given a lovely gift from her co-workers. The social which followed the meeting was happily spent at cards and other amusements and with some refreshments. On the third Friday in June, it was decided to hold a pot luck supper.

Recital Program Event of Sunday

Three young ladies, each with unusual musical ability, and along different lines, appeared yesterday on a recital program, and while the recital was a presentation by Mrs. P. S. Robinson, of Miss Anita Hermann, pupil in violin, the other two, Miss Lenore Headley, accompanist, and Miss Ruth Gehbel, soloist, each did so exceptionally well with their parts on the program, that to all three belong considerable credit, and the appreciation of the audience included all three.

Epworth Leaguers Guests at Elgin

Twenty young people, members of the Epworth League of the Methodist church, drove to Elgin last evening where they were guests of the Elgin Leaguers at a joint meeting. A program of vocal instrumental music and a short skit, followed the regular devotional meeting, and then came the recreational hour with games and refreshments on the church lawn. The young people of La Grande report a very pleasant time.

Mrs. McCall's Piano Pupils in Recital

The recital given yesterday afternoon by the piano pupils of Mrs. R. G. McCall, in the banquet room of the Sacajawea Inn was quite a pronounced success. About 75 people enjoyed the program given by the group of musicians who ranged from the mere beginners who had difficulty in reaching the floor to the more advanced students, and all deserved the compliments showered upon them, as well as upon their instructor, Mrs. McCall, in giving a party for her pupils Wednesday afternoon.

Women's Missionary Society of the Christian church has postponed its meeting for Wednesday to Thursday. The society will meet at the home of Mrs. L. S. Weeks, with Mrs. R. I. Putman as leader.

MENUS

By SISTER MARY

Buying fruit and vegetable calls for a combination of accurate knowledge and good luck. Every lookout and grocer arranges his wares to look his best and it's only the canny shoppers who discover the bluish if there is one.

There are certain conditions and qualities pertaining to some seasonal fruits and vegetables which the inexperienced housewife should know.

Strawberries at their best should be of medium size and of a bright red color. The color should be uniform, fading slightly toward the tip, perhaps, but not showing green. The fruit should be free from excessive dirt. Berries are bad since they invite decay. Immature or one-sided berries are apt to be seedy and poorly flavored and are not desirable. The boxes, whether they be quart or pint size, should be well filled, and a quart weighs twenty ounces, including the box. If it weighs less than seventeen ounces it is short weight.

Peas are another fruit most plentiful during May and June. They are easy to choose for they have few imperfections. The size of this fruit usually has little to do with its quality, and pound for pound one pineapple yields about the same percentage of edible material as another. Fruit wanted for immediate use should be of an even golden yellow color. This denotes full ripeness. Pulling leaves from the "crown" is another test of maturity. The leaves should pull easily and be white for some distance up from the base. The fruit should not be hard and green looking unless it is to be kept for some time before using. Over-ripe peas are soft and frequently have black spots. The black spots indicate low color, which becomes troublesome with warm weather. This usually starts at the base of the fruit and is plain to be seen.

The seasonal vegetables are string beans and peas. While these are obtained throughout the year they are most plentiful and cheapest during May and June.

What are "string beans" to us mean several varieties to the marketman, but a matter whether they are green or yellow they should be clean, vivid and smooth. "Black cut," which becomes troublesome with warm weather. This usually starts at the base of the fruit and is plain to be seen.

Brothers Deacon said that he thought he would see Purie alone. "Very well," I agreed. "I'll put in the time poking around the mine buildings. We'll go into the mine together."

Henry stopped the car at the wash in the flank of the skeletons, and I showed him the shanty. I watched until he passed through the door of the shanty. Evidently Purie was at home, for he did not reappear. Going back to the sedan I drove on to the mine buildings. When I had spent the prescribed half hour nosing around the plant I trudged back to the canyon. Deacon was coming down the trail, wiping his forehead.

"You found him, eh?" "Yes. He was mixing a mess of flapjacks, and he didn't see me. He seemed to be talking to a couple of men he called 'Bull' and 'Nap.' But I saw that he was only talking to himself."

"Bull and 'Nap'?" I echoed. "What did he say to them?" "Just about what you told me," Henry grinned. "I didn't get much of it, but I've an idea he was talking about you. 'Tis a darn shame a' he put like me don't have his bit o' peace without them city sharpshooters in, ain't it, Bull? Whur's that, Nap? Ye reckon he got the daylights scared outen him? He-he-he!" He saw me then.

"I chuckled. 'Did you get anything out of him?' " "Just about what you told me," I thought for a moment. "Does this conversation with 'Bull' and 'Nap' strengthen your opinion that it was Purie who tackled me in the resort last night?"

Henry looked troubled. "It should, I suppose. But after talking to him I don't know. By the way, here's a souvenir for you," Grinning sourly, he handed me Purie's right-sided eyeglass. "It seemed to be necessary to him and I thought revealing him of it was one way of disarming him."

This was Henry's first expression of uncertainty, and it delighted me much more than his 'souvenir' did, but I examined the lens curiously. We made our way to the cavern-like gash in the opposite wall of the canyon and, preceded by the white beam of Deacon's torch, plunged into its forbidding blackness. The passage was as crooked as a mazzanilla skek; its walls were of slaty formation, very rugged and beetling in places. The dangers of our exploration were made clear when a ton of debris crashed down a yard or so behind us.
