16 Drowned When Flood Sweeps Area

BUCHARIEST, Rumania, June 12 (AP) — Sixteen persons were drowned in a torrent which swept over the Svinich district of Transylvania during the night.

Widespread areas of farmlands were inundated and thousands of cattle were drowned, extensive property damage being caused.

The frightened population fled to the mountain sides to escape the rising waters. Torrents from swollen mountain streams continued and further loss of life and property damage was expected.

GOLD BULLETS

by Charles G. Booth

SYNOPSIS: Andrew Ogden blackmailed 25 years for a crime he did not commit! Peebles concludes that "Pillion" killed Ogden because the latter, in his days as Alex Peterson, had shot Joe Lundy and believed him dead. Visited by the "woman in black" a few days before he was murdered, Ogden learned she is Mrs. Lundy and her husband is still alive. Peebles deduces "Pillion" killed Ogden after being confronted with the facts. Questioning of Mrs. Lundy-completed, Peebles sends her to police headquarters and returns to his den and a surprise—Jerry Ogden and Lucy are there; with Henry Deacon.

Chapter 32
PRODIGALS

I leaned against the door jamb, my legs weak as a newborn calf's, and I saw that I would be making an ass of myself, if I didn't look out.

I managed to stumble forward and they swept towards me, simultaneous "Uncle John" on their lips, and took me into their arms. None of us spoke until I suddenly remembered Deacon.

"Where did you find them, Henry?" I demanded.

"I didn't find them, John. They dropped in at headquarters."

Neither of them spoke. Haggard of face, Jerry whipped out a cigarette, made a boogie of lighting it, and flung it into the grate. At that moment he reminded me of the Andrew Ogden, the real one, Peterson, I had imagined, but had never known.

"Mrs. Lundy was here," I said, to help things along.

"Where is she now?" Henry exclaimed.

"On her way down to headquarters. She has a good deal to tell you."

Jerry broke in suddenly, addressing the fireplace:

"Like a shunk!" And then, miserably "You are entitled to take the hide off me, Uncle John."

At this Lucy ran to his side and slide her arm around his waist, challenging Deacon and me with defiant eyes.

"It's my fault, Uncle John!" she exclaimed emphatically. "You mustn't blame Jerry. I made him do it."

"Made him do what?" I inquired alarmed.

"We'll tell you afterwards, Uncle John!" Her voice was tremulous.

"Jerry was with his father Friday night before—before it happened, Uncle Andrew told him everything, Jerry must tell those things first."

"I agree with the young lady," Deacon observed dryly. "But you might as well tell us what Mrs. Lundy had to say for herself, John," Deacon added.

I did so, putting it briefly. Just as I finished, the telephone rang. My old colleague in Los Angeles was calling and I talked with him for a few minutes.

"Go ahead, Jerry," I grunted, when I had hung up.

"Mrs. Lundy told you the truth," he said earnestly. "But she didn't touch the meat of the story. It's the queerest tale you or Captain Deacon ever heard. It's a long tale, too."

"Get at it, then."

"Mrs. Lundy has told you how dad came to Torridity," Jerry began. "You know about him being a big Uncle Jerry to Torridity. You know how he got the name, Ten-to-One, and how he made a fortune by gambling in mining properties."

"You don't need to go into that, my boy," I said. "Tell us what happened to your father—how Alex Peterson turned into Andrew Ogden."

"Let him get on with his story," Deacon hinted.

Jerry threw him a defiant look that almost reminded me of Alex Peterson.

"The last place I worked," said the girl applying for a position as domestic cook, "there was a butter knife, but I never had to wash it."

Wife: "Do you know that you haven't kissed me for six weeks?" Prof. (Who is absent-minded): "Good heavens, who have I been kissing then?"

Of graduates and brides;
And, the last survey discloses,
Taxes and suicides.

George: "That horse knows as much as I do."
Clara: "Well, don't tell anybody. You might want to sell him some day."

A Scotchman was discovered around Detroit with a pair of rumpled trousers on his arm. "Can I help you in any way?" asked a kindly citizen. "Man," replied the Scot, who was evidently a newcomer, "I am looking for the Detroit Free Press."

No woman minds having her snips criticized, but she won't stand for any remarks about her snails.

Being a boob is no great handicap. Some conceited chump will always appear in time to set you right, so don't worry.

Now think what a godsend it would be if there were some device that would ring a bell when we turn out a sloppy piece of work, or automatically give us a kick when we use only about a quarter of our energy on our job.

Now when you read that she raised her eyebrows, you don't know whether it means an expression of surprise or a bit of pencil work.

Sympathizer: "How's your insomnia?"
Incurable: "Worse and worse. I can't even sleep when it's time to get up."

A Scotchman owned a store. For several weeks his business was not what it had formerly been. He decided to give a gift to each customer on a certain day and placed a sign in his window on the appointed day: "Coat hanger and cigar lighter given away free with each purchase." The people swarmed his store, and each customer received a nail and a match.

"Jerry had started in to tell him when he heard shouting off toward the town. Half the town was having taken the Two Brothers' crazy mad, by the way they were coming. It looked bad and dad knew it."

"But Uncle Jerry shook his head," he said. "I'm going back. It isn't right to rope you in one. You've always treated me a dose right better." So long!

"He dragged open the door he had burst through a moment before and was for making off across the desert when dad jumped on him from behind and swung him towards the flank of the skeletons behind the mine buildings.

"Dad must have been pretty husky in those days. He grabbed Uncle Jerry by the shoulders and hustled him towards the mine tunnel and dumped him into an ore car."

"Keep your head out of sight and shut up!" he growled, running the car into the mine.

"A bullet flattened against the overhang of rock above the tunnel entrance and the crowd let out a fearful yell as they saw what dad was doing. Dad shut the door of the tunnel entrance and padlocked it; then he set his back to the door, dropped his hands to his gun belt, and waited.

Jerry's vivid account of those thrilling six hours in Torridity 35 years before is continued in tomorrow's installment.

AT THE THEATERS

All Talking
"In Old Arizona"
At the Arcade

"In Old Arizona" is the first big outdoor talkie and a surprising disclosure of what can be done with a microphone in the open air. It presents a sort of "Wind Price Glory" story with western trimmings. One thing that it absolutely assures is a different sort of show than has ever been seen at any time before. For this reason "In Old Arizona" will perhaps in days to come be reckoned an epochal. The voice of Warner Baxter reaches notably well. Dorothy Burgess finds herself quite accustomed to this scenic role. Edmund Lowe amuses with his portrayal of a hard-boiled soldier.

"In Old Arizona" opened at the Arcade today.

Film at Star

Louise Fazenda, for years the premiere comedienne of the screen, has suddenly found a new niche for herself.

Her great success in a gripping mystery special, "The Terror," and has given her the central role in another even more eerie thriller, "The House of Horror," which is at the Star theater today and Thursday.

Shirley, Gordon, Adams, comedy honors with Miss Fazenda in this picture. Thelma Todd and James Ford are paired in a novel love story, and grotesque mystery character roles are played by William V. Mong, Emilie Chantard, William Ormond, Date Fuller, Tommie Holtz and other eminent artists.

Bertram Christensen, who directed "The House of Horror," also adapted it to the screen from the narrative of a real-life affair, sold
