ARRESTS BREAK UP DARING GANG

Two Youths and Woman Apprehended in Frisco — Confessions Made.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 19 (AP)—Arrest of two dapper youths and a pretty woman, and seizure of arms and ammunition with baggage containing more than $10,000 in loot, was believed by police here last night to have brought an end to the activities of a gang of daring bandits reaching from Vancouver, B. C., to Los Angeles.

The three were captured in a luxurious downtown apartment, shortly after telegrams from Seattle and Los Angeles police had informed San Francisco authorities that they were headed for this city, presumably in a sea-going power yacht. The yacht was seized by police as it rode at anchor in the harbor.

Admit Their Identity

Police said the three admitted their identity. The men gave their names as Lloyd S. Sampell, and Ethan McNabb. The woman said she was the wife of Sampell. Detectives said she was also known as Mrs. Lydia Summers. Police records show that both Sampell, Alias Summers, and McNabb, were paroled bank robbers from San Quentin prison.

Vancouver police gave the information that Sampell was wanted in the Canadian city in connection with a series of daylight hold-ups which earned for the perpetrator the name of "the phantom bandit." A photograph of Sampell was identified by 13 victims of the daylight robberies, as that of the alleged bandit.

Confess to Robbery

Sampell and McNabb, according to detectives, admitted they robbed the Shattuck Avenue branch of the Bank of America in Berkeley last Friday, obtaining $15,000 and carrying in an automobile after terrorizing employees and customers. Some of the seized loot was identified as that stolen from the bank.

The arms found in the trio's apartment were said by police to have comprised a unique arsenal. It consisted of high powered rifles, guns equipped with maxim silencers, the latest model shotgun, equipped with tear gas mechanism, and hundreds of rounds of ammunition, steel and soft-point, in addition to a brace of automatic pistols.

Experiments To Cause Rain Fail

HONGKONG, June 19 (AP)—Army aviators today carried out rain-making experiments above Hongkong, dropping a powdered chemical known as "Deolin" on the clouds.

Seven flights were made, above the clouds and 100 pounds of Deolin dropped. The chemical theoretically has a refrigerating effect on clouds, causing greater condensation and subsequent rainfall.

Hongkong is suffering from severe water famine, necessitating drastic action to replenish its supplies.

CAPTAIN IS TAKEN FROM SHIP WRECK

It was expected the cutter would head for Astoria, where the 21 members of the Lauro's crew were taken. The trip would require about two hours.

Captain Johnson had maintained a lone vigil aboard the freighter since his crew was taken ashore Monday. At that time he refused to leave his charge and would not listen to the pleas of the rescuers that he retreat from his perilous position.

All Monday night and all day yesterday terrific seas pounded the ship and great waves dashed over her, driven by a gale. Still Johnson maintained his watch.

He hoped, it was said, that the derelict upon which he stood would drift ashore and that by remaining aboard he could save what was left of her for her owners.

Screen Grid Tube Leading 1929 Parade; Price Trend Is Downward

CHICAGO (AP)—Duplicating the ascendancy of the dynamic speaker of a year ago, the AC screen grid tube is riding the crest of the 1929 radio receiver wave.

Nearly all of the larger exhibitors at the annual trade show of the Radio Manufacturers' association displayed some development of this electronic device, which gives greater amplification without external oscillation control than previous RF tubes. However, its adoption was on a conservative basis, designers not attempting to press the tube too hard.

The result was a more stable circuit than would be the case were attempts made to work the screen grid to its maximum with attendant difficulties.

Improved dynamic speakers, the "boom boom" that marked their debut last year, dominated, comprised another show high spot. The new speakers, their sponsors said, produced "highs" and "lows" at equal amplification. More attention was paid to the acoustic properties of cabinets, and provision was made for a proper baffle board for the dynamic.

In cabinets, the trend seemed definitely toward the console and away from the table set. All new station selector dials were compact housings, adapted for the modern home and the small apartment.

Radio furniture makers have been active in refining details, and modernistic models won attention. Cabinets to match home furnishings were shown in many period designs.

Automatic volume control was an addition to many sets, and a new station selector dial was shown. Remote control by means of a 50-foot cord and arm-chair turning control box was an improvement intended to take the "drudgery" away from manipulating the receiver. This was accomplished by including a small motor in the receiver to turn the dial, the motor being operated from the control box.
