JAPAN GIVES APPROVAL TO PEACE PACT
for the renunciation of war was made by Foreign Minister Beaman of France in a message sent through the Associated Press to the American people April 6, 1927, on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the entrance of the United States into the world war.

Frank B. Kellogg, the then secretary of state, foresaw in the suggestion a hope for the advancement of a great and shortly thereafter negotiations were opened in Paris among 15 of the principal nations.

A National Policy
Even though the treaty, as a result of the delayed Japanese action, has not come into force, it already has been adopted as a national policy by the United States.

President Hoover in his Memorial day address said that "if this agreement is to fulfill its high purpose, we and other nations must accept its consequences; we must clothe faith and idealism with action."

"We believe," the president continued, "the time has come when we must know whether the pact we have signed is real, whether we are condemned to further and more extensive naval construction. Limitation upward is not now our goal, but actual reduction of existing commitments to lower levels."

Outlaws Aggressiveness
The president added that this treaty means an abandonment of the aggressive use of arms.

Hugh S. Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium, and head of the American delegation to the preparatory disarmament commission at Geneva, emphasized at the recent meeting of the commission the necessity of its application to the disarmament problem and similar sentiments now are being expressed both here and abroad in connection with the naval conversations.

FLIER'S WIFE IS WELCOMED TO FRANCE
HAVRE, France, June 24 (AP)—Pauline Parker, new Madame Jean Assolant, was welcomed to France with an airplane salute today while her husband and his two comrades of the Yellow Bird bent low and kissed her hand.

When the Ile de France, bearing the American wife of Assolant, came into Havre, a military plane with Assolant's friends aboard flew to meet her and circled low while the cannonplay was lowered to allow the American bride, her arms full of roses, to be the first to land and to be greeted by her husband.

NEW YORK, June 25 (AP)—
The stayaway of the Yellow Bird, Arthur Schreiber, of Portland, Maine, returned to America aboard the Leviathan today—first class—attired in extreme cut French clothes but with little to say about himself or his uninvited trip.

He was met at quarantine by his father, Morris Schreiber, a Portland factory worker, with whom he exchanged affectionate greetings, and then he posed, with his father and by himself, for several photographs.
