AT THE THEATERS

Ralph Graves seems fated to get lost in pictures. Recently, he was one of the featured cast in "Sisimarine," an undersea sensation. Now, he appears in "The Eternal Woman," another Columbia picture coming to the Star theater on Tuesday wherein he is shown in a wreck at sea. He appears with Olive Borden in the featured role.

got up the courage to try it, we found that it was really one of the wisest things we'd ever done. The new picture is a blithe romance of backstage life, with a shipwreck, chase with run runners and a few other thrills thrown in. Dorothy Sebastian, Leola Hyams, Edward Earle, William Bachtel, John Byron and others of note are in the cast.

"Spite Marriage" At Star With Buster Keaton

Playing the hero of an absolutely straight drama, which any romantic hero could play with no changes, whatever in plot or action, is the unique method by which Buster Keaton has made one of his most successful comedies in many a season, "Spite Marriage," his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer vehicle which is now playing at the Star theater.

"Spite Marriage" sees Keaton in what would, if played "straight," be an absolutely straight romantic role such as John Gilbert might play. But his own particular playing of this role turns it into comedy. His comical mistakes, and his department in thrills, battles, and other details, makes the story an uproarious farce.

"For years," says Edward Sedgwick, director of the new picture, "directors have held that straight character roles, tinged with a comedian's own technique, would be interesting on the screen, but no producer has wanted to try the experiment. But when we finally

The mystery of Andrew Orndeen's murder is solved. Orndeen has survived the hazards of suspicion and intrigue; Lucy and Jerry are happily married. One important point remains—the final chapter of "Gold Bullets."

Chapter 49
ACCORDING TO POE
Sixty-nine is getting on for much of this sort of thing and I am glad it is over. Mrs. Morfit has just been in brooding over me with a hot lemonade and a dish of warm olive oil. But now she has gone and in my old carpet slippers, Polyandria at my feet, I am drawing over my book and absorbing the pleasant heat from the crackling cyanoptus log in the grate. I am fearfully alone tonight. Andrew gone and Lucy gone—not really going, and I am gaining something unusual in nephew—tries to assure me, as if I didn't know—leaves me desolate of spirit. My drooping eyes fell on a calendar hanging on the wall. It is an old calendar and there are many pen-calls on the current and yellow top date sheet which records the days of the month of July, 1896. The calendar advertises Brewer's Whiskey and its mouth picture a voluptu-

Lucy nestled against her uncle—seemed inexpressibly dear to him. Mrs. Morfit says it is marvellous, both of them say I should burn it. Well, I'll take it down after I've had my little joke on Lucy. Sitting up with a start, I saw that Lucy and Jerry had come in. They have been making love most of the day and I have had hardly a word with them. "Oh, you were asleep, Uncle John," Lucy cried distressfully. "Nothing of the sort!" I swam. "I was reading." Lucy laughed and kissed me and Jerry grinned and dropped his arm over my shoulder; both of them then perched upon the arms of my chair. I love to buy; then near me. Their bounding youthfulness warmed my cooling blood. Jerry picked up my book, which had somehow slid behind my back. "Poe," Lucy sniffed, "as she caught sight of the volume. Lucy reads Wells and Shaw and Melville. "You'll have a nightmare, Uncle John."

"No," I said, with a little secret smile. "I was only reading 'The Purloined Letter.' I had been thinking of my wedding present." "What has 'The Purloined Letter' got to do with our wedding present?" Lucy demanded, greatly astonished. "Not your real wedding present, my dear," I said banteringly. "Just a temporary gift. A real wedding present requires prayerful meditation." "For an elderly bachelor you are wonderfully wise," Lucy informed me. "But—I insist. What has 'The Purloined Letter' got to do with our temporary wedding present?" "Dear me!" I exclaimed. "Don't you remember the story of 'The Purloined Letter'?" Listen, then: "A minister of France has stolen an important letter and hidden it in his house. His recovery is imperative and the highly trained services of the French police are enlisted. At various times during the minister's absence the police examine his house with characteristic thoroughness. They examine every square inch of his rooms and furniture. And—they fail. They fail because they are mathematicians without imagination—and because the minister is a poet as well as a mathematician. Poe's detective is called in. He reasons that the minister, knowing the conventional thoroughness of the French police, is too clever to conceal the letter in the conventional way; he reasons that the minister will leave it where it is so apparent to the eye that it will be ignored. Poe's detective is right—and the letter

It's a smart bargain who can walk on crutches like he was recently injured. And it's a smart business man who can detect it, and keep his pennies for the Salvation Army.

Doctor—"About nine patients out of ten don't live through this operation. Is there anything I can do for you before we start?" Patient—"Yes, please hand me my hat."

"I have the faith that moves mountains," said Mr. Goofor. "I wish you had the faith that would move the ashes out of the basement," his wife replied.

When an established price is cut, something comes off—profit, quality or service.

You used to think the package which the man handed with such infinite care contained eggs.

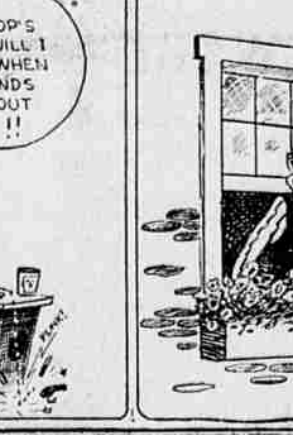

"We live in an age of wonders," remarked the inventor who was not successful.

"Yes," answered his discontented spouse, "wondering where the money went and where more is coming from."
