LEGAL LIGHT—If any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.—Matthew 5:28, 29.

No man is ready for citizenship in a republic until he is ready to abide by the will of the majority.

You never see men fighting for a "great moral principle" that threatens to reduce their revenue.

A retired army officer says our public school histories teach a lot of "poppy-cock and mythology." Perhaps the bare facts are not exciting enough to interest the students.

The world powers have finally given up trying to satisfy Russia at disarmament parleys. Instead of entering into the spirit of the thing, the stubborn bolsheviks keep on holding out for peace.

For as far back as we can remember, the farmer has always tried to raise fat and bulky hogs. Now, however, it is reported that slim hogs are more in demand than fat ones. Pigs, like human beings, are being obliged to reduce. The price of lard has fallen heavily, and at least a fourth of a big hog is lard. Then, too, public taste is changing. Hams now must be lean and tender. Bacon must not be too fat. Chops must have plenty of red, lean meat in them. To be sure, this doesn't make great difference. Only it is traditional to appraise a pig's value by his general fitness. It will seem odd, now, to find lean pigs getting the blue ribbons.

FOR SAFETY IN SWIMMING

If you are going to do any swimming—and what able-bodied American isn't?—it might be a good thing for you to give a little thought to the remarks of Health Commissioner Shirley Wynne of New York about the dangers of swimming.

Examining the nation's statistics on swimming fatalities, the commissioner discovers that more than 8,000 Americans were drowned at bathing beaches and swimming holes last summer. Oddly enough, most of the victims could swim. The use of ordinary care and common sense is recommended by Commissioner Wynne as the best way of cutting down this toll.

"One must learn how long he can remain in the water without becoming chilled, how many times he can dive and how far he can swim without becoming exhausted," says the commissioner. "Exhaustion at any time is dangerous."

"Everyone should know how to swim. If you do not know how, learn now. It is not enough to know how to swim a few strokes. One must be able to swim a good distance without becoming unduly fatigued, and every person also should be able to swim for a few minutes while fully clothed. "Absolute self-control, is necessary when one is in the water. If one loses that self control, a single convulsive breath may mean death. When water touches the opening of the windpipe it may cause a spasm of that pipe and a drawing of water into the lungs.

"If you are in danger of drowning, try not to struggle. Turn on your back, kick with your legs and float until you become quiet and have regained self-control. Persons subject to fainting or epilepsy should never enter the water; those suffering with kidney or heart disease or high blood pressure should enter the water solely on the advice of their physicians."

Those suggestions are not hard to remember. Properly heeded, they could save many lives.

ABE MARTIN

Now that the historic old party of Jefferson is out of date and "old" nothing it might set a fine example for the country by living within its income. Remember how fussed up we used to get when we tied a girl's shoe?

SPANISH FLIERS REACH GIBRALTAR

Spain ten and fifteen thousand spectators who came across from Spain. Major Franco and his companions, Major Eduardo Gombas Galarraga, Captain Julio Ruiz de Alarcos and Mechanic Pedro Madariga remained aboard the Eagle until almost eleven o'clock when they came ashore in launches and proceeded to Government House where they were formally received by Governor Sir Alexander Gosley and Rear Admiral Berkeley, commanding the British Gibraltar naval force.

"Shall Fly Again" As the airman called at Government House to pay their respects to the governor they said: "Naturally we shall fly again. The accident was nothing."

Captain N. F. Laurence, commander of the Eagle, would not comment on the rescue, his only remark being: "We did our duty. Nothing else. I have nothing to add."

Only with the arrival of the men was it learned by how slim a margin they had been snatched from the sea, for they had used up the last of their signal rockets when the welcome lights of the Eagle came into view. Then followed tense minutes while they waited to learn if they had been seen and finally came the huge aircraft "Mother Ship" to pick them up.

RESCUER DROWNED

HIO SIDO, Cal., July 2 (AP)—Harold A. Rasmussen, 29, was drowned in the Russian river while attempting to rescue Miss Helen Kemp, who was seized with cramps. Miss Kemp was rescued by Harry A. Gibbs, 31. Both men plunged into the river at the girl's cry for help. Rasmussen failed to return. The body was recovered later. All are from San Francisco.

EUGENE PREPARES FOR 'SUNSET' DAYS

Men Letting Whiskers Grow and Women Wearing Hoop-Skirts.

EUGENE, Ore. (Special)—Strangers passing through this city are bewildered at the sight of many bearded and picturesquely dressed men and demure, hoop-skirted women on the streets, in the shops and offices and even in the theaters and other public places. The bewilderment is usually short-lived, however, for soon the newcomer is informed by one of the whiskered gentlemen or old-fashioned women that Eugene is to have a pioneer pageant July 25, 26 and 27.

Called the "Sunset Trail Celebration," the event has taken on state-wide importance and now promises to be one of the outstanding celebrations on the Pacific coast. Situated in the heart of the historic pioneer "Oregon Country," Eugene and the surrounding area is rich in lore of early settlement days, and the staunch, aggressive spirit that led the makers of the state out from the East is to be the inspiration of the coming three-day celebration.

Of greatest interest will be the "Sunset Trail Pageant," written by W. F. G. Thatcher, of the University of Oregon, in which 1500 citizens of Eugene will participate. This will be given each evening, on a huge stage to be erected in the center of Hayward stadium, at the University of Oregon. Accommodations are being provided for 30,000 spectators for this event, and already people of this city have entered enthusiastically into rehearsals for the many features that will make up the pageant.

The pageant will not only depict the growth of the Oregon country from prehistoric times, but will present a brilliant ballet in which the future that lies before the state will be shown in an elaborate and most unusual way. The early episodes will show in turn the Indian in his native haunts before the coming of the white man, the migration to this region, the coming of Lewis and Clark, the settlement of early communities, on up to the present day industry and commerce. Then the ballet will be presented, with dancers, showing the resources and industries of the state, such as forestry, agriculture, fishing, commerce, industry and power as they are expected to be in the future.

"Rosaria" Director

Directing the pageant will be Mrs. Erolis Smith, of Portland, who has won national fame through her work as director of "Rosaria," in her city during the annual Rose Festival. She will be assisted by John Stark Evans and Rex Underwood, of the University of Oregon school of music; Mildred LaCompte Moore, dancing director, and scores of others whose talents have been proved in music or drama.

Of outstanding interest and importance will be the pioneer parade and an exhibition of pioneer relics, both of which are being staged under the direction of Cal M. Young, noted for his pioneer research. People of all communities of all parts of the state are assisting in this, and a great variety of

CHIMPANZEE BABY COMING

Give Joe Monti, a baby chimpanzee just over from the interior of Africa, a high hat and a cigar, and life is a sweet song to him. Joe Monti stars among the newly added will animal acts with A. G. Barnes circus, coming to La Grande Thursday, July 11, but he is anything but wild. Joe is a Beau Brummel, a lion tamer and a deuce of a fellow among the women. Lifting his hat to the ladies is the best thing he does. Joe believes in higher education, too, tho he can't read yet, but he can hold and scan a book as convincingly as any scholar.

The baby chimpanzee is remarkably intelligent, and Max Kling, just over from Hamburg, Germany, and assistant to John Holcott, the principal animal trainer, is studying English feverishly so that Joe Monti won't learn to speak if he were he does.

Modern industry and commerce will have its day also, for an industrial parade, which already has entries from every corner of the state, has been planned, and J. S. Maglady, one of the city's leading business men, is giving his whole time to the development of this phase.

Afternoon of the celebration days will be taken up with an air circus that promises to be the outstanding aeronautical event of its kind of the year in the Northwest. This will include airplane races from Portland to Eugene, trick and stunt flying, and all other features of such performances. Prizes approximating $1,000 have been posted for races and other events, and at least 20 planes not competing are expected from army and navy posts. Airmen from every state in the west have been invited and many have already accepted.

Let us consider today the floor-walker—he puts his heart and soul into his work.
