Social Affairs Few During Days After The Fourth

A few lone sparklers that sputtered anti-climactically—and here again a popping firecracker—were all that remained yesterday of a Fourth that the kiddies re loath to see end.

Officially, the Fourth came on Fourth of July. But the "kiddies" (it that includes most everyone) Fourth began with the week's preparations were part of the fun. They varied from buying fish-tackle or new golf balls to setting the flag out of the store-room and putting a watermelon on ice. And now the flag has been re-erected and the "glorious day" is over—but not quite. Because, like or most the two or three days or the "recovery period."

Sleeping out in the hills over-erth has its thrill, but two days or it is likely to have its aching bits. And the mosquito bites don't matter when the fish were being, but now that the last of trout has disappeared from the platter, the pecky bites are bad. Little Johnny and Mary may be bumped the mosquitoes on their faces in the excitement of it all, probably the whole family—sids sleep. But if it wasn't worth while they would Johnny and Mary be out on the lawn yesterday trying bravely to revive the will with a few sorry-looking arkers and firecrackers.

Recreation has meant, too, at these two days of the weekend, Friday and Saturday, have been quiet at home and that excitement has been close to the point.

MENUS

By Sister Mary

No fruit is harder to select than melons. There's such a large family of them and they all have their particular characteristics.

Regardless of variety, all melons must have heat before they can reach maturity, so the weather conditions throughout the country have much to do with their quality. Melons must be ripe and they must be mature on the vines. They may ripen after picking without harming the flavor, but full growth must be allowed before harvesting.

The time-honored practice of thumping watermelons with the fingers is a reliable test. A full grown, ripe melon has a dull muffled sound when thumped, while a green melon rings with a metallic sharpness. In other words, the ripe melon says "plink" and the green one says "plink."

Colors Tell Much

The color of the under side should be noticed. Pale yellow, lemon or a warm ivory color indicate a sort of warty roughness indicate ripeness. A warm yellowish green rather than a bright clear green on the top is desirable.

There's a thin, film-like covering all over the surface of a watermelon. When the melon is ripe, this covering will peel off like dry wax if the thumb nail is drawn across it.

If buying part of a cut watermelon keep in mind that the flesh should be a deep pink or bright red well out to the rind. It should be crisp and juicy.

Bround or long melons are equally good but those which are misshapen should be avoided. Large melons are more desirable than small ones but a heavy small melon is preferable to a light large one. The color of the seeds has little to do with the maturity of a melon since they naturally range from white to brown or black.

Over-ripe melons are as undesirable as immature ones, but they can usually be detected by the dull appearance of the rind and the large amount of yellow veins through the green surface.

Watermelon sherbet is refreshing for hot weather meals.

Watermelon Sherbet

Four cups watermelon pulp and juice, 1 egg white, 2-4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons cold water, 2 tablespoons orange juice, few grains salt.

Press melon through a coarse sieve. Add sugar, orange juice and salt and stir until sugar is dissolved. Soften gelatin in cold water and dissolve over hot water. Stir into melon mixture and fold in white of egg beaten until stiff. Turn into freezer and pack in six parts ice to one part ice cream salt. Let stand two hours or longer.

HEALTH

CALL OF THE "FAST MOVING WORLD" INFLUENCING FOOD AND REST HABITS

By J. C. ANDERSON, State Health Officer, Austin, Texas.

Lloyd George is of the opinion that "the most important workshop in the land is the home," and we know from observation that communities where individual homes exist produce a thriving, dependent people. The home is the backbone of a nation. But modern tendencies are so driving people away from their homes that such a caption as "Sweet to Whom?" is not amiss.

Mother, father and children must follow the long, long trail of the automobile, and when that is safely tacked in the garage, there is the "call of the movie." What time has anyone for rest—what time for keeping tabs on health?

Note what Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary of health of Pennsylvania, has to say:

"Today's high speed with its night allurements is constantly taking an increasing toll among the pupils of high and pre-high school ages. Thus, fatigue steps in and health walks out.

The girl was shot five times, Mayberry saving one bullet from his revolver for himself. He sent the bullet into his head but had not died when the father, William Hendershot, prominent New Madrid county farmer, rushed up with a shotgun and discharged it into his head. He died immediately.
