NEW MEXICO BONE FIND IMPORTANT

Remains of Prehistoric Animals of 250,000 Years Ago Found.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 2 (AP)—Bones of prehistoric animals that roamed the southwest 250,000 years ago, recently found in excavations in New Mexico, were termed "the most important historic discovery ever made in America."

By Dr. William A. Bryan, director of the Los Angeles County museum, in a report before the board of supervisors Friday.

Dr. Bryan made his statement after an extensive study and classification of the remains, which were shipped here. A ground sloth, large camel, prehistoric horse, cave bear and other extinct animals were found by Roscoe P. Conkling of El Paso, Texas, last January.
