SNOOK'S DEFENSE ASSAILS AUTOPSY

Coroner's Work Incomplete, Jury in Murder Trial is Informed.

COLUMBIA, Ohio, Aug. 10 (AP)—The autopsy performed by Coroner Joseph Murphy on the body of Theresa K. Hix was assailed as incomplete by the defense today in the trial of Dr. James H. Snook for the girl's killing.

The assault was made in the form of testimony relating to six narcotics that Dr. Snook had testified were taken at various intervals either by himself or Miss Hix. Dr. Clayton S. Smith, professor of pharmacology and physiology at Ohio State, under questioning of John F. Seidel, one of Dr. Snook's attorneys, described the nature and effect of the narcotics.

The state objected to the detailed testimony charging that no evidence had been introduced to show that either Dr. Snook or Miss Hix had been in the habit of using any of the narcotics regularly.

The coroner made it impossible through his improper handling of the body for us to make a test to determine whether Miss Hix had taken narcotics the night she was killed," Seidel said. "We are trying now by the explanation of the effect of these narcotics to show that one or both of these persons were under their influence the night of the killing."

Previously the defense had attempted to tear down the accuracy of the testimony of C. E. Long, Columbus City chemist, with regard to two emotional stimulants he said he found in Miss Hix's stomach after the killing.

Dr. Frank W. Harrah, a physician testified that a physical examination made on Dr. Snook August 2, revealed "apparent" marks on his body indicating an attack such as the defense maintains was made on him by Miss Hix shortly before she was killed.

Dr. Snook on the stand declared the girl attacked him as they sat in his automobile and that the first blow he struck her with a hammer was delivered to protect himself from the attack.
