OUR FATHER'S CARE—Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.—Matthew 10:29, 30, 31.

One thing we hope we never do. And that's to ridicule the activities of other state educational institutions to the attempted advantage of the one located here. That's the pet pastime of the Corvallis Gazette-Times with most of the mud thrown at the University at Eugene, of course. We have a hunch that Claude Ingalls might boost his own game more rapidly by being a bit more considerate of the other fellow's. But Claude just can't write from that point of view.

Two feminine motorists gave a "lift" to two young men hiking along a Kansas highway. Now they are in a hospital after being beaten, robbed, left by the side of the road. Which should be a good lesson for all motorists. It doesn't pay to give rides to those who hike along the highway. There are numerous examples of robberies resulting from the practice. Such things destroy one's impulse to kindness. If motorists consistently refuse rides to hikers, there will soon be fewer hikers on the road and fewer crimes of this kind in the papers.

THEY'LL COME TO IT

Willamette valley towns have long been worried about being compelled to build modern sewage disposal plants instead of dumping their filth into nearby rivers. Now they take heart with a report by a state college engineer that there is still sufficient oxygen in the Willamette to sustain fish life, though no bacilli count has yet been made. Commenting on the subject the Corvallis Gazette-Times says:

"The college engineering department has saved the cities along the Willamette alone several million dollars as a result of this survey. City Attorney Jay Lewis made some investigation at the time this propaganda was being sent out by the fishing interests, the septic tank interests and the state board of health which wants it made possible to take a drink out of all the Oregon streams, and he discovered that it would cost the city of Corvallis $250,000 at least to make a proper disposal of its sewage to say nothing of the enormous yearly upkeep, if we were obliged to erect septic tanks. The reports of the college engineers are reassuring to the tax payers and should be satisfactory to the fishing interests who were probably misled and were being used."

There is a lot the Corvallis editor doesn't know about sewage disposal plants, their upkeep, and the contamination of stream water. The La Grande plant pioneered sanitary disposal in Oregon and now has what is considered a model unit that represents an investment of $125,000. Its capacity is sufficient to care for a city two or three times the size of Corvallis and the "enormous" yearly upkeep amounts to an average of $5000, or about 50c per capita per year.

It is only a question of time until sewage disposal plants like this will be required throughout Oregon. People of the state are not going to allow cities to dump their sewage into streams that are used for bathing, fishing, drinking, stock watering. The Willamette is no exception and those cities now using this stream as a sewage dump can confidently look forward to the time when they must mend their ways. A bacilli count will probably help them. And about the time that some farmer with cows watered from the Willamette brings suit against those cities for damages caused by typhoid infection, or some father brings suit following the death of a child for the same reason, those communities will become interested in sanitary disposal mighty fast.

Stream disposal is about as out of date as anything can be in municipal sanitation. Many states have laws prohibiting that method of handling sewage. It is the only sensible solution and it's only a matter of time until Oregon will fall in line.

Early Tuberculosis Curable in Majority of Instances, Delay Costs Most of Lives

By F. M. Pottenger, M. D., Monrovia, California.

Early tuberculosis is a curable disease in the great majority of instances, provided the patient is completely treated and responds with a whole-hearted cooperation. A diagnosis is of little value, no matter how early it is made, unless the patient receives an intelligent and adequate treatment as a result of it.

Unfortunately the patient with early tuberculosis rarely feels severely ill, or if he does, it is usually only for a few days. If he gives himself a little better care than he is accustomed to do, he will probably experience a subsidence of symptoms. Under these circumstances he is misled into feeling that nothing in the matter, and is too prone to assume that a wrong diagnosis has been made.

It should be known generally that when tuberculosis is sufficiently active to produce symptoms it is a dangerous disease. Further, it should be known that it will require months for the "process" to heal.

On account of the subsidence at symptoms that usually takes place following the onset of the disease, the patient often feels that there is no need for haste in undergoing treatment, that a few weeks will make no difference. He awaits a more favorable time. He adjusts the time of treatment to seasons and to business, social and domestic conveniences, thinking that it will not matter. The result of this course is too often an increased spread of the disease, a cavity in the lung here more extended before and a comparatively easily arrested disease changed into one that yields with difficulty; also, more than this, an increase in the time necessary for treatment, with a much greater call for monetary expenditure.

Delay costs most of the lives in tuberculosis. Early diagnosis and immediate adequate treatment, with conscientious following of medical advice on the part of the patient, will reduce failure to a minimum. While much hope can be offered to the patient suffering from advanced tuberculosis, the result is attained only after the expenditure of a much greater amount of time and a much greater expenditure.

or financial outlay; and, in the end, the result is less satisfactory because the patient suffers a reduction in his efficiency.

Collegians' Peace Pipe

Under a towering pine tree in the foothills of the White mountains on an August afternoon in 1700, Eleazer Wheelock gave the Wa-Woo-Wa Indians 500 gallons of rum for a tract of land and it is from that tract that Dartmouth college has developed. The stump of the pine tree still stands and around it each spring at commencement the graduating class gathers and smokes the pipe of peace—a tradition that starts with the Indian origin of the college.—Detroit News

Ready to Tackle Any Job, He Says

"I am now ten pounds heavier, strong and well, and ready to tackle any job that comes along with more vigor than I have had in

W. S. HILLIARD

Twenty years ago, Sargol and Sargol Soft Mass Pills got all the credit.

"You can just ask anybody in my neighborhood how sick I've been. I suffered with stomach trouble so badly I could hardly eat anything and I became terribly run-down. I was so nervous that I never got a good night's rest and so, week after week, I couldn't get up a flight of stairs without gasping for breath. I was always taking some medicine for indigestion.

"In fact, I tried just any medicine I thought might help me, but nothing gave me any relief until I started Sargol. Now, every step of stomach trouble is gone and I feel like a new man entirely. I eat anything I want. I'm never nervous and I've gained ten pounds. The pills ended my indigestion, too, without the slightest bad effects. I'm full of energy all the time and honestly believe that Sargol is the greatest medicine ever put on the market."

The above statement was recorded by me by William S. Hilliard, 1641 1/2 Seventh Avenue, Seattle, Wash. Sargol may be obtained in La Grande by Red Cross Drug Store.—Adv.

LaFollett To Face Grand Jury Probe

PORTLAND, Aug. 12. (AP)—Charles LaFollett, state representative from Hillsboro, failed to pay $150 toward the support of four minor children an alternative given him in circuit court, and now must face the county grand jury. LaFollett had been given until Saturday to deposit the support money with the county clerk.

Miss Lida O'Bryon, deputy district attorney, said she was informed by the representative's attorneys that they would fight the non-support case to the supreme court if necessary.

The LaFolletts were divorced several months ago.
