Girl Aviators Off On Second Lap of Air Race

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Aug. 19. (AP)—Eighteen girl aviator contestants in the national women's air derby, were in the air at 6:42 a. m. today, off on the second leg of their race to Cleveland, which started at Clover field, Santa Monica, Cal., Sunday. The hop will take them to Yuma, Ariz., flight officials in Cleveland having granted the fair fliers the concession of only flying low over Coahuila that their plane numbers might be checked, instead of landing there as previously scheduled.

Vera Walker, Los Angeles girl pilot, was the first to put her plane in the air, starting at 6:18 a. m., Mrs. Keith Miller of New Zealand, was second. Thereafter the others gracefully and easily as birds, swept into the air at regular two minute periods, quickly climbing in to the haze of the western sun rise to surmount the 10,000-foot high San Bernardino mountain range.

The eighteen planes headed for Beaumont pass, wide and wind-swept cut through the range that is the gateway to the below sea level floor of Imperial valley, California, 175 miles from here, across on the Mexican border line at the southern end of the irrigated desert valley.

The other 15 fliers, in the order of their starting, were: Amelia Earhart, Opal Kung, Margaret Perry, Ruth Elder, Edith Polz, Gladys O'Donnell, Ruth Nichols, Thelma Rasche, Blanche Noyes, Claire Faby, Louise Thaden, Marcel Crosser, Florence Barnes, Bobbie Trout and Phoebe Omlie.

A 15th contestant, Mary Von Mack of Detroit, was not among today's starters, having failed to finish the first day's hop. She landed at Montebello, near Los Angeles yesterday, and returned to Clover field to await the decision of race officials as to her status.
