Sport Slants

by ALAN J. GOULD

The biggest crowd on any gridiron this fall, or for that matter in any other field of sport, will be Christian Kenney Cagle of Louisville and West Point.

The Army's All-American half-back puts the finishing touches to a leading career this season and likely will touch 100 from Hialeah to Palo Alto, as they haven't been packed since the days of that other famous railroad, Grange or Illinois.

Over the day-in-and-out campaign of baseball, Babe Ruth of course plays to far bigger crowds than any football hero, predicted to one performance a week, in a season that lasts only about three months at the most but on the luck of a deciding power-play game, Cagle is a bigger card than Ruth or anyone else in sport, at least for 1929.

The Army captain, in his five years' career, has established the main thrill for some 215,000 fans. This year, with West Point playing the most pretentious schedule of its history, Cagle's performance are likely to be the main attraction for upwards of 250,000, an average of 75,000 spectators for each of five games that will take place in Cambridge, New Haven, New York, Irbana and Palo Alto.

The biggest world's series turnout was 225,000, in 1926, when Babe Ruth and the Yankees dropped the final decision to the Cardinals, and it took seven games to roll up that total.

Jack Dempsey, in his five outstanding battles for the heavyweight championship, drew an aggregate turnout in excess of 500,000.

All of which seems to show that the big pull, the home run, and the wild dash through a hole in the field make up a trio of the great "gate" attractions anywhere in the world of sport.

It was easier in baseball's pre-war days for a pitcher to collect 30 victories than it is for a slugger to have a 30 home run. It wasn't unusual for a Mathewson, Young, Alexander or Johnson to log 20 triumphs on the mound in the old days but it was not until 1920 that Babe Ruth began, reeking the Ironmount with unopposed, double totals of circuit blows.

Now, the situation is exactly reversed, with the 30-victory home run and little or no novelty whatever but the 20-victory no-overer appointment is an extinct accomplishment among the brawlers.

Half a dozen clouters have passed the 20 mark already in home runs and as many more may do so before the season closes.

Not since Sergeant Jim Hughes (owned the trick for Cleveland in 1928 has any twister registered 20 victories and the spell won't be broken this season. Grace of the Athletics and Grimes of the Pirates are good starters, each reaching the 15th victory around mid-season but they bogged down somewhat after that, for one reason or another.

The clouter, it seems, is making it tougher for the pitcher.

Most of the star performers in the amateur golf championship at Pebble Beach may be pardoned for thinking about "Black Wednesday" with some apprehension, for that's the day when the 22 survivors of the quadrilateral start made play with two 15-hole rounds. Not since he won the title in 1926 has George Auer Kim gotten to this particular day of nerve-racking competition and the great Babe Jones has had his closest calls in these opening tests.

In a beautiful ankles contest in London, one man was disqualified because of too many contours. Apparently the mosquitoes got there before the judges.

Gibson Dunlap Excels Jones in Western Amateur

By Alan J. Gould
The echoes of two opening rounds of golf rolled back from the mountains across Oregon lay to day as the battle of Pebble Beach, with the amateur championship of the United States at stake, surged into the final qualifying round.

The first shot fired was a routine 70, two under par, by the defending champion, and top-heavy favorite of the whole field, Bobby Jones, in the first eighteen hole test yesterday. The reverberations of this final seventh game out to sea when a lone curve a slim early haired youth of 21, Gibson Dunlap, of Los Angeles, with the grace and the courage to put a sensational 85, thereby taking the lead unassumingly from the king and establishing a new competitive record for one of the hardest—all championship rounds.

Sinks 49 Foot Putt
Throughout his round, the young Los Angeles star potted with steady accuracy, sinking a 40 footer on the second hole for an eagle three as a forerunner of what he did in seek. For the day at least he outshined Ben Sawyer's blare, one more effective than Babe's of the famous "Columbia June".

Dunlap, a junior now at the University of California at Los Angeles, spent most of his early golfing years in the Chicago district before moving to the Pacific coast. He has figured in a number of big tournaments in Illinois, as well as out here, winning the southern inter-collegiate championship last year. He has a half-swing with his iron shots that produces consistent accuracy.

Should either Dunlap or Jones slip off their feet, a grin of five spots each with a par 72 for the first round, appeared ready to step up and bid for medal honors. In this group were Don Mac, the western champion, and Dr. O. P. Willing, both of Portland, Ore.; Harrison H. Johnson, of St. Paul; Eugene Homan, of Englewood, N. J.; and Roland Kirkland, of Washington, D. C. A stroke behind them, at 73, came another "black horse," John E. Lehman, of Gary, Ind., ex-college player, while the 74 notch embraced Cyril Talley, British Columbia; George Van Rijn, of Detroit; William K. Egan, of Columbus, Ohio; and Vincent DeLo, another Portland, Ore. club; Francis Quinn, of Boston; and Rexley Storey, of England, who at 76, with Ross Sumnerville, of Canada; Jose Rosovsky, of New York; Frank Polo, of Portland, Ore.; Eddie Reid, of New York; and Rudy Kopp, of Chicago, in the 78 group.

Champion H. woman won a rocking chair marathon because a Kansas City contestant fell asleep during the contest. Moral: Don't let people catch you napping.

STARS ON TOP IN PACIFIC LEAGUE

Hollywood Wins Double Header while Ducks and Angels Break Even.

By The Associated Press
The coveted half game lead of the Pacific Coast League, which has changed hands a dozen times in the last few weeks, today was in the Hollywood Stars' sack along with nine games the southern club won out of a series of ten from the Sacramento Senators at Wright Field, Los Angeles. The Portland Ducks, who enjoyed the best record of the line since August 22 when they took it away from the San Francisco Seals, were in second place.

Both ends of the holiday double-header went to the Stars, the first by a score of 5 to 5, and the second by a count of 11 to 4. Yesterday's game for Hollywood in the first, but he couldn't keep the Senators from logging ten hits the Stars took twice in the second. Hank Halvey allowed the Sacramento boys an even dozen hits, while his mates took 14 off Gillick and Cano.

Ducks Win Series

The Ducks and Los Angeles traded even, the split giving the north-ers the series five to four, Los Angeles won in the morning in the home city of their rivals, the first being 6 to 2, while the latter won in the afternoon 7 to 6. Berger and Webb hit for the circuit in the first battle.

San Francisco's Seals won the series by six games to three in Seattle, giving the Indians an even break in the holiday double header there. The Indians won the double in the first game 11 to 7, and the San Francisco team took the second 5 to 6. Two five run rallies gave Seattle the long end of the score in the first inning a five run spree in the second while the Seals gave them the victory.

Missions Defeat Oaks

The Missions defeated the Oaks twice, closing up the nine-game series by six wins. They won the morning game by a score of 6 to 1, Bert Cole turning in a good performance on the mound. Young George Carter led the Reds to victory in the second game a 5 to 2 score.

Athletics Take Double Header From Yank Crew

By Herbert W. Barker
Associated Press Sports Writer
If there existed any reasonable doubts about whether major league baseball ever, the Labor day double-header baseball feast seems to have dispelled them.

Victory in both ends of yesterday's double bill with the Yankees ended the Philadelphia Athletics' long reign of American league advantage for 13 1/2 games and simultaneously the Chicago Cubs withdrew the game separating them from second place, Pittsburgh to 12 1/2 games by trailing St. Louis today.

The A's beat the Yankees by 10 to 3 and 5 to 3. Old Jack Quinn kept the Yankees hits well scattered in the opener while the league leaders were getting George Minton to the showers with a six-run rally in the third inning. Home run by Shammock and DeLoe helped roll up the lousiest score. The Yankees appeared to have the second game won, 5-4, until the ninth when three hits and Larry's error gave the A's two runs and the game. Previously Ruth and company had shelled Rubin Wallberg from the box with four runs in the sixth but they could do nothing with Howard Ehmke.
