Yet this very minute people all over the country are taking chances with permanent disability or even death. The best and surest cure for deafness is prevention.

Ear troubles in children, especially are liable to occur as a complication in diseases, such as measles, scarlet fever, influenza, pneumonia, recurrent colds etc. In babies, especially, the ears should receive careful attention. Infants cannot tell where the pain or discomfort is; they simply announce that something is wrong by crying, fretting or being restless. Many cases of marked damage to the hearing apparatus occurs in neglected ear conditions during early life.

The middle ear is intimately connected with the throat and back part of the nose by way of a small open tube known as the eustachian tube. As long as the tube remains open for drainage and ventilation of the middle ear cavity, we are not likely to have trouble. But infection in the nose, throat or sinuses, tonsils and adenoids, can cause inflammation and swelling in the eustachian tube, and when the tube closes germs are sealed up within the middle ear, pus quickly forms, and this is opportunity for all sorts of trouble.

The ear drum may rupture and afford drainage through the external ear canal, the discharge may continue for a while without serious damage, the pus and infection may gain access to the internal ear, or through a natural opening backwards to the mastoid cavity and cells behind the ear, meningitis, brain abscess, sinus thrombosis or infected blood clot within the large blood vessels of the skull and brain can now occur. These conditions are very serious, mean a definite mortality, and as it is, with deafness, the ideal treatment is prevention. The operative treatment in mastoiditis is not high as to risk to life, but the other troubles are considered with grave concern by any surgeon called upon to handle them.

Simple, good remedies, which may be offered by friends or purchased from the drug stores are not safe; not water, and medicines put into the ears are not liable to reach the cause of the trouble.

Ear troubles are not to be considered lightly. They can cause illness, and death. Many do cause chronic disability and invalidity. It requires skill, training and experience, the assistance of the X-ray and laboratory procedures to arrive at a correct diagnosis. Place the responsibility of deciding whether it is a minor or major affair upon a competent doctor and do not wait for trouble to develop. A periodic health examination is worth more to you and yours than the time and actual outlay in cash it requires.

When Death Tests a Fabric's Strength

An Outstanding Value at $1.69 Per Pair

Mr. ALVA MITCHELL, who farms near Winamac, Indiana, climbed down off his disc harrow for a drink of water. His team, frightened at something, started a runaway, the heavy harrow banging and bumping over the ground. He cut across the field to head them off, grabbed for one horse's head—and tripped! As Mr. Mitchell tells it in his letter: "Just that morning I had bought a pair of Oshkosh B'Gosh Overalls at Haas's at Winamac and luckily I had them on. When I grabbed for that horse's head I fell but my Oshkosh B'Gosh Overalls caught on the tongue and held me suspended. For a hundred feet I was carried between two plunging horses and ahead of the heavy disc. Then the disc hit a gate. I was knocked loose. The smashed gate post raised the disc just enough to let it pass over me and I escaped with a few bruises. Had I not been wearing Oshkosh B'Gosh Overalls I claim that I might not be here today to tell this story." Signed, ALVA MITCHELL.

Laboratory tests show that Oshkosh B'Gosh Overalls are made of the strongest, toughest, longest-wearing cloth made. Experiences such as Mr. Mitchell's, where the greatest test of all is made by a powerful, plunging, half-crazed team, prove its strength beyond question.

Cheap overalls cost more per month than good overalls

GRACEFULLY NONCHALANT

When you've made a social blunder—have mistaken the hostess for a sympathetic guest and remarked what a rotten party it is—maybe it's all right to be nonchalant and pass it over as nothing.

Social blunders aren't so terribly serious. We can live them down in-time. But, good gracious! it's hard to be nonchalant when you've made a financial blunder.

That kind of blunder looks a lot bigger—and it surely is bigger when you've failed to pay attention to your fire insurance.

You just can't afford to take chances—you HAVE to be sure. And that kind of protection is our business. Let Jack Ferris tell you about it.

Pantages now says he got a "raw deal" from the jury. That is always the refuge of the poor sport and the guilty.

The troubles of the stock market are serious for financial centers and for those poor saps who thought they were "investing" on margins. But it may have a very beneficial effect for the rest of the country by releasing call money and speculator's funds for legitimate business purposes. The advance in stocks had made money tight in business. The decline should make it much more plentiful when the new level has been stabilized.

AN ELECTION WILL DECIDE

Various questions of interest to those residing in the districts immediately adjoining present city limits have been brought to the attention of The Observer during the last few days. An investigation of them leads us to believe that the extension project can do no serious injury to more than a very few objectors and that it would bring marked benefits to the majority of the people both inside and outside the existing boundaries.

The matter of several districts voting on the question separately has been discussed but those who have determined the district limits point out that all portions of it are reasonably dense in population and that the exclusion of any one section will endanger the degree of growth which the community wishes to show, that to take in part and leave out part would again tend to provide city facilities for outside areas that do not lend co-operation in return. One district as called for by the present petition may work a small hardship on a limited number if the district votes to come in, but that hardship is negligible and seems to be one that cannot be avoided.

Regarding the matter of agricultural land included in the proposed district—one and two-acre tracts—The Observer is informed through the assessor's office that no increase in assessed valuations would result in any case by inclusion within the corporate limits of the city. An acre of ground now assessed at $200 would still be assessed at $200 and the increase in taxation would be a little over four dollars a year to meet the municipal levy. To offset this would be water and sewer service, street maintenance, reduced rates for electricity, insurance, water. In matters of economy, the average resident would find being in the city no more expensive and much more convenient as municipal services were installed. Many of them would make marked savings by coming in.

Whether or not the majority of the people in the proposed extension area vote to come in remains to be seen. No one can object having the subject voted on and a decision reached one way or the other. That is the purpose of the petition to be presented to the city commission, which, according to law, requires them to order the election regardless of their desire in the matter.

The Observer is thoroughly in favor of seeing the election held. Apparently sentiment is against the project in the outside districts but a decision at the polls will settle the matter at least for ten years. We can't afford to pass up the opportunity for that decision. If it should be favorable, as it may, the advantages gained by the entire La Grande community would be of lasting benefit to every citizen regardless of present residence.

ON HOW TO AVOID DEAFNESS
By Vance P. Perry, M. D.
Kinston, North Carolina

Deafness is a handicap. Every one recognizes that and of course no one would willingly "throw away the ability to hear." Yet hundreds are doing just that. An earache is the pain anywhere they—a strange signal—a notice that something is wrong. Noise in the head, ringing in the ears, a soft feeling in the ears, or a throbbing ear, painful or not—these symptoms all call for a competent doctor's opinion. For generally they can be cured.
