

They did the Job!

Uncle Sam spoke—and they answered! Almost overnight a million men sprang to arms.

From farm and factory—from office and studio—from college classroom they streamed. Artists, engineers, salesmen, teachers, laborers—rich men and poor—members of old “first families” and immigrants to our shores—marched shoulder to shoulder in a great common cause.

Some fought it out in the kitchens peeling potatoes—some “did their bit” in recruiting camps far from the fields of glory—some gladly gave that “last full measure of love and devotion” out in No Man’s Land. Not one was unimportant—each had a real part in “doing the job.”

And so today—on the eleventh anniversary of that glad November 11 when bells proclaimed peace—we honor the men who served their country in the World War.

“Over there—over there—
Send the word—send the word
Over there—
That the Yanks are coming—
The Yanks are coming—
The drums rum-tumling
Everywhere.
So prepare—say a prayer—
Send the word—send the word
To beware.
We’ll be over—we’re coming over—
And we won’t be back till its over—
Over there.”
