

NEW COCKTAIL.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 28 (AP)—Mrs. James M. Moran, wife of the commissioner of prohibition, has made public the recipe for a cocktail, described as one "that satisfies and does not inebriate," which she has introduced into Washington dry circles.

"Take a pound of seedless grapes," she said, "chop them very fine, and a quart of grape juice, stir thoroughly and serve very cold."

"It is very simple," she added, "but really it is very good."

Mrs. Moran introduced the non-inebriating cocktail at a meeting of a W. C. T. U. chapter.

ELFISH ELECTION NAMED.
ITS LOST COLLAR BUTTON
LONDON (AP)—At last a scientist has defined the electron in words anyone can understand.

"The electron," said Sir Oliver Lodge in an address here on the relationship between science and religion, "is the lost collar button of the universe."

"We know that the electron is in space, but we cannot exactly locate it. It is like a collar button which we know is in the room, and even under the dressing table; yet we cannot locate the thing."

FAKE BUYING STOPPED.
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Oklahoma City radio dealers desire to rid the city of "joy riders," persons who have sets brought to their homes for demonstrations but who never make a purchase. Hereafter, they have decreed, prospective buyers must present evidence of intention to buy before a demonstration will be given.

NOTRE DAME IS GOTHAM.
NEW YORK, Nov. 28 (AP)—Notre Dame's lumberjacks, who clash with the Army on the Yankee stadium gridiron tomorrow before 50,000 spectators, reached their destination bright and early this morning. Ending their journey from South Bend, Ind., the Notre Dame party of 48 players, trainers, coaches and managers debarked at Harmon, attended church at Croton and breakfasted at the Westchester country club, Rye, where they are quartered.

OUT OUR WAY

Death of Kentuckian Recalls

Sheep-Cattle Battles of West

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP)—The bloody days of the west, when sheepmen invaded the domain that cattlemen considered their heritage, is fiction to this generation.

To Kels P. Nickell, who died in Jackson, Ky., recently, it was a piece from his book of life.

A blacksmith who saw in sheep a potential fortune, Nickell turned to raising them in the Iron country of Wyoming where none had contested the cattlemen's rule of the range.

Hardened by many years in the west, Nickell stubbornly fought for his life and the right to a place on the range for his 2,000 head of sheep. The story of that fight is a saga of the west.

He was shot from ambush and severely wounded. He was marked for death by Tom Horn, professional man killer, and became involved in a brawl with a cattleman who was Horn's intimate. The cattlemen emerged with knife wounds.

Nickell's 16-year-old son, Willie, was ambushed near his father's ranch. He was wearing his father's coat and was astride Nickell's horse when he was shot to death, apparently mistaken for his father.

Then began a relentless man hunt for Horn, who was captured six months later. At his trial in Cheyenne, the prosecution offered a "confession," damaging statements which were gained through a ruse.

Posing as a "bad man" Joe LeFors, deputy United States marshal, inveigled Horn into a drinking bout, his tongue loosened by drink, Horn made statements which were copied by a court reporter concealed in an adjoining room. The "confession," with circumstantial evidence, convicted him.

He was sentenced to be hanged after a 14-day trial. There followed months of legal delays during which the desperate man sought to foil justice. Once he escaped with another prisoner after clubbing an undersheriff, but was recaptured.

A plot to liberate him by dynamiting the jail was exposed by a prisoner to whom Horn entrusted messages. The prisoner turned them over, not to Horn's friends but to a Cheyenne newspaper, which secured the biggest scoop in the journalistic history of the state.

Protesting his innocence to the end, Horn died coolly on the gallows, and it was the comment of the period that not until he dropped through the trap did prominent cattlemen breathe easily.

Nickell survived the threats on his life, finally to retire to the south.

VALLEY OF SUN PORCHES PROVED BY POLYTHYMEN
BLOOMSBURG, Pa. (AP)—By using sun porches to keep his chicks off the ground, Samuel Golder, Columbia county farmer, lost only 23 out of 600 this year.

He used two brooder houses with a sun porch on each, elevated about two and one-half feet from the ground, screen enclosed and equipped with a wire bottom.

At the end of four months 285 pullets were placed in the laying house and when they were six months old Golder was getting better than 50 per cent production.

John Briggman, using a similar plan on his Salem township farm, lost only 46 out of 1,100 chicks.

RINGS IN PAIRS BOOM
PARIS JEWELERS' SALES
PARIS (AP)—The vogue of wearing dinner rings in pairs has spread so rapidly recently that salesmen in jewelry shops now ask as a matter of course: "Will you have the pair of a single stone?"

Women are searching the antiquity shops for pairs of old bracelets and for lockets with pairs of miniatures painted on them or ivory which can be converted into rings.
